ENROUTE TO THE BUG HOUSE President International Association for Suppression of Overcoats

President International Association for Suppression of Overcoats. Draws big audience at depot. Expositors with foolish persons who endanger their lives by going about burdened with clothing.

"I" said a solemn-faced, slow-speaking man at Union station Thursday morning. "I am the president of the International Association for the Suppression of Overcoats."

The president of this great association for sartorial reform was a very tall, very spare man, thin as a reed, with a very narrow face and a very sharp nose.

Over his ordinary clothes was a cape. The person to whom the president had addressed himself while stopping at the station waiting for his train connection, was unknown to him.

"Young man, why do you torture yourself with that great clumsy garment? Do you know there are 142,000 pores upon the human body? Do you not realize that each of these is a small pair of lungs through which fresh air is supplied to the system?"

"Do not, do not, my friend. Laugh not at matters of so great weight. Your life hangs in the balance. The great organization of which you are the head is seeking to bring the people out of their darkness into light. There are upon this terrestrial globe of ours 456,375,597 persons who clothe themselves every year with the abominations of the heavy overcoat."

"I have a startling secret to tell you," he whispered. "Do you know the secret of Theosophy's living 999 years? Not because he didn't wear an overcoat. It was because he didn't wear an overcoat."

"There he is," he said, and a big man in a top coat with one of the station attendants.

"Do not disturb me now, secretary," was the reply. "But you will be late for the international convention," insisted the big man.

"I have a startling secret to tell you," he whispered. "Do you know the secret of Theosophy's living 999 years? Not because he didn't wear an overcoat. It was because he didn't wear an overcoat."

SPUD NEARLY NINE POUNDS Potato of Immense Proportions Exhibited by Man from New Idaho Country

W. H. Henry of Twin Falls, Idaho, is a guest at the Paxton hotel. He has on exhibition in his room a potato weighing six pounds and nine ounces which was raised this year on irrigated land.

"I had a potato show in Twin Falls last week," said Mr. Henry. "The farmers here are rather timid about uncovering their big spuds at first. They want to hold back and see what they had to best, but toward the end of the week they came in with a rush."

While Omaha is far famed for pork, never until this year did it become famous for supplying souvenir postal cards to every state in the union except Delaware, which, dealers say, is about the size of a souvenir postal card and has not shown a demand for the product manufactured and imported by an Omaha firm.

In less than two years 2,000,000 cards manufactured in this city have been sold to dealers in all parts of the United States and the trade is reaching a proportion almost beyond belief as Christmas approaches.

As an example of the uses to which the decorated cards are used, one Omaha firm has given an order for 5,000 cards, printed in red, with white letters "Be a Bonuser." These cards have been so popular with business men that the Omaha dealers have been unable to supply them fast enough for local consumption.

A wholesale grocery house of Omaha buys souvenir postal cards at a cost of 40 cents per thousand for the use of traveling salesmen, who send them to merchants, giving notice of the date of their arrival. Merchants have written many letters to the wholesalers complimenting them on the beauty of the cards, and waiting for them as they would a letter with a remittance.

"Our daughters have made a collection of the cards you have sent us," writes one merchant from a Nebraska town. "The cards make such admiration that we have decided to put in a line of cards, and want prices on cards ranging in price from 3 cents each to 25 cents each."

This made the wholesaler think, and he arranged with the big Omaha stationery house which is selling the cards to job them and almost every wholesale grocery house in Omaha is now taking orders for postal cards.

Another plan adopted by business men of Omaha is to use the postal card to give customers notice of sales, and parties called to attention to telephone numbers. One card says, "My telephone number is -" and the merchant writes in the number, mailing the novel cards to patrons, with the result that a call is received for almost every card sent.

Doing business by postal card is quite a fad in Omaha and dealers predict that the cards will be used more extensively than ever during the coming year.

The measure of Omaha's prosperity has been taken last month, and in spite of the lean-weather banking and talk about poor crops, cards are selling at from 1 cent to 25 cents each. Never have such large quantities of cards been offered before and Christmas and New Year's greetings will be sent this year by postal cards.

Some of the art cards imported by an Omaha firm are extravagant, flowers being worked out in silk plush with gold mountings. While the demand for postal cards is $2.50 each, is not large, many cards are sold at 50 cents each, and the 25-cent lines are in big demand. Men and women on the postal cards are dressed in silks and satins, and tiny sailboats with silk sails are seen against blue satin seas and beneath the pale pink domes of Venetian skies.

Territory is Large. From Omaha shipments are being made to the large cities of the east and the inland towns of the west, the southern cities look to Omaha for a supply, while the mining camps of Nevada and Alaska
