

STICKNEY HAS THE BALL

Great Western President Hits Bull's Eye, Say Bankers.

MILLARD FOR CENTRAL BANK

Omaha Banker Points Out Folly and Uselessness of Hoarding Money as is Done in the Country.

A. B. Stickney, president of the Chicago Great Western railroad, "has the ball" on the financial situation, its cause and solution.

This is the opinion of Omaha bankers, and President J. H. Millard of the Omaha National bank says:

"I have always been in favor of a 'centralized bank,' as it would be called in the United States. I am in favor of such a system as England has, which is a bank chartered in Canada, where a panic is beyond my memory. This country is new. It will grow to the bank of England plan, and yet England has had some financial trouble. But the system seems to be better than ours and when we become an old country we will undoubtedly adopt the plan of carrying on business through a centralized bank and its branches, the bank to be practically run by the government. I do not know the details of the French organization, but the French people understand the husbandry of money and wealth. The French always have money. They are thought to be shy and parsimonious when it comes to finances they seem to be the best of the old world powers."

Bankers of Omaha agree with President Stickney, who delivered a notable address before the Original Roosevelt club of St. Paul Tuesday evening. Many country banks are themselves hoarding money and carry the idea through that they should keep on hand at this time the total amount of their indebtedness, which the city banks do not pretend to do and are not required by law to do at any time.

No Use to Hoard Money.

"This country bank hoarding is as serious a drawback as the hoarding by individuals," said an Omaha banker, "and it is only making the situation worse. It is as much the duty of individuals and country banks to put the money of the country back into circulation as it is to subscribe to a war debt at a time when the country faces a foreign foe and young men are placing their lives in the country's service. No lives are required to offset the injury of the present trouble, but money is needed. The people have it. They had it a year ago and there was sufficient currency to meet all needs. The crops were larger and the speculation in Wall street was three times as much as it has been this year. Less than one-third as much is needed to carry on the business of the stock exchanges this year as was required last year. The crop is smaller, though about as valuable as last year, but less money is needed to take it to the primary markets. The country has the money. Let the people and the country banks put it into circulation. The city banks have been hoarding the country banks and have been working to lift the inconvenience."

Some Funny Incidents.

Many funny things are happening in the banks of Omaha. Among the numerous peculiarities is noted the fact that one bank has put out checks which, instead of being payable to "Bears," are made payable to "John Doe," and his half brother, "Richard Doe." John Smith, who is found north, east, south and west, has checks made out to himself or bearer and the American names of Doe, Roe and Smith are being made famous by the banks who have adopted the fad, for no known reason.

As a result of the "freak" checks which are in circulation, all of which are as good as the banks themselves, the collectors have a weakened to the situation and Manager Hughes of the Clearing House association has been swamped with requests from all parts of the United States for cancelled checks. KENNEDY ON POSTAL SAVINGS

Former Congressman Says These Banks Would Have Prevented the Financial Flurry. "Postal savings banks would have prevented the present financial flurry," said ex-Congressman John L. Kennedy, who addressed the members of the Omaha Real Estate exchange Wednesday on the subject and declared that the government had used for the people's money all the time and more particularly at present when millions are needed for the improvement of inland waterways.

"Instead of contracting the currency, as is commonly reported, the system would keep money in circulation," said Mr. Kennedy. "The money of the people deposited with the postal savings banks at this time would not disappear in tea saloons, stockpiles, sugar bowls and holes in the ground, but it would be re-deposited by the government in banks of the country, who would keep it in circulation."

In the bill which Congressman Kennedy introduced he proposed to pay interest of 3 per cent on amounts of $500 or under, 4 per cent on amounts up to $500 and no interest for amounts above $1,000.

"My idea in introducing the bill," he said, "was to encourage the man who had a small amount of money and at the same time give a man with large amounts an opportunity to place his money with the government at such times as this when some gloomy idea might cause him to distrust the banks. If he had $50,000 he could deposit it with the United States government, draw no interest on it, but know that it was safe, and the government, on the other hand, would deposit it with a bank which would keep the $50,000 in circulation."

Mr. Kennedy spoke enthusiastically in support of the system and said that if the first, second and third class postoffices were made savings banks the United States would have in the neighborhood of 40,000 new banks. At this time the money could be invested to good cause by putting millions in waterways, even if the interest paid was 1 to 2 per cent.

"No civilized country on the globe is without the postal savings bank system except the United States," said Mr. Kennedy, "and the government, which shuts its eyes to the systems of other countries is making a mistake."

HE CATCHES THE POINT GOOD

Depositor Gives His Idea of the Force and Effect of Cashier's Check. A German citizen who appeared in the United States National bank during the first days of cashier's checks had great difficulty in grasping the monetary significance of the new system.

"I want my money," he said stolidly at the window and in reply to attempts to explain that it was not considered for the good of the community that cash be withdrawn from the banks at present he only looked blank and repeated stolidly, "I want my money."

After the clerks had exhausted their efforts on him and failed to produce any appreciable result upon his understanding he was taken to the cashier. But the result was no better. Then he was taken to Vice-President Caldwell who explained the significance of the cashier's checks, pointed out that they were every bit as good as cash, that the bank had the gold in its vaults and that as soon as the rest of the country resumed payments he could get his entire deposit in cold, hard, heavy coin. The German citizen listened stolidly to this. When Mr. Caldwell has finished he asked:

"Do you understand the situation now?" "Yes," said the German citizen. He paused awhile and then added: "If my baby wakes up in the night and cries because it is hungry I give it milk tickets."

IMPORTANT ARREST IS MADE

Lincoln Man, Alleged Counterfeiter, Caught by Federal Officers. SAID TO BE QUITE VERSATILE

Not Only Passes Spurious Money, but Wins Hearts of Young Women Who Fondly Kiss Him Goodby.

Secret service officers of the government have succeeded in capturing and leading in jail one Isaac T. Gano at Lincoln, who has been wanted for several months for alleged passing of counterfeit $5 gold pieces in Missouri and southern and western Nebraska. Gano was arrested in Maywood, an obscure little town in the extreme western part of the county. Monday and brought to Lincoln and arraigned before United States Commissioner Marley and bound over to the federal grand jury in $1,000.

Gano was traced from Jansen, Jefferson county, where he had last planted one of the coins, passing it on a grocer there by the name of Friesen. The grocer, who is from western Missouri all along the Nebraska and Kansas border and a number of the bad coins recovered. He had in his possession a commission and a star, indicating him to be a member of the "American Detective Association." The trouble is represented that he was out on some important detective service and was smooth enough to ingratiate himself into the confidence of the communities in which he worked. But at Jansen he did not impress the Menonite grocer (Friesen) very deeply with his importance, and so after passing the counterfeit coin on Mr. Friesen one night he departed for parts unknown.

Located in Frontier County. Mr. Friesen kept tab on him and finally succeeded in locating him in Frontier county and put the secret service officers upon the fact. Gano was cutting a wide swath at Maywood and played his detective part for all it was worth. He carried his best hotel in the little town, hired a number of young women, took them buggy riding and was in the height of his glory when the secret service officers swooped down upon him.

The identification being complete Gano was brought back to Lincoln. Just before leaving the little hamlet of Maywood a couple of his young women friends called upon him while he was in the custody of the United States officer and kissed him an affectionate goodbye.

Grocer Friesen positively recognized Gano as the man who passed the counterfeit coin on him and he further answers the description of the much wanted Missouri man as well as the same party who was operating along the Kansas and Nebraska border.

The secret service officials regard the capture as one of the most important made in this state since the dispersal of the McCarty gang ten or twelve years ago.

HOW TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS

Campaign of Education Waged by Street Railway Officials Among Car Men.

The Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company inaugurated a new scheme Tuesday evening which consists of a series of lectures by the officers of the company on the general topic of the prevention of accidents. The first lectures were given to the day men of the Vinton street division at the Vinton street car barns and about eighty of the day men were present and enjoyed the lectures and smoked cigars which the company officers brought along.

Louis C. Naah, superintendent of transportation, opened the meeting by stating the nature of the lectures to be given and the idea of the company in giving these lectures on timely topics. R. A. Lausler, secretary and assistant general manager of the company, gave a ten-minute talk on the subject of the day's meeting and then introduced Arthur W. Gross, general claim agent of the company, who spoke at length on the specific subject of "Accidents and Their Prevention." William Musgraves, assistant superintendent of transportation, addressed the men along the same lines.

"The men all showed an interest in the meeting and paid the strictest attention to the remarks of the officers of the company," said Mr. Lausler. "We also placed in the hands of each man a thirty-second page book on the prevention of accidents, written by a practical street railway man.

CAT HAS OVER NINE LIVES

Lives After One Death and Health Department is Called On to Kill It.

The family at 606 South Twenty-eighth street is in trouble and has sent a Macedonian cry to the chief of police, the Board of Health and the remover of dead animals to bring speedy assistance. The trouble is all due to a cat. Until recently this was considered an ordinary cat and not one that would take advantage of a confiding household by strictly enforcing its claims to nine lives when a majority of the family would decide that the time for its existence had ended. Now the family is best hotel in the little town, hired a number of young women, took them buggy riding and was in the height of his glory when the secret service officers swooped down upon him.

Some days ago the housewife decided that Grimalkin had outlived its usefulness and was a nuisance. Paterfamilias coincided with the judgment and was elected executioner. Just the form of peaceful death decided upon by him does not matter, but the hour of execution was at night and with rites suitable for the occasion the decree of the household was carried out and the form coin on him and he further answers the description of the much wanted Missouri man as well as the same party who was operating along the Kansas and Nebraska border.

Other methods of extermination were tried, but the cat survived. Tuesday morning home treatment for existence had resulted in producing paralysis, but the cat refused to depart. A call was sent to the police department for a man to come out and kill the cat. The man who received the call thought it was a joke. Then a call was made upon the health department, where no one ever jokes, and the remover of dead animals was instructed to go out and kill the cat before carrying it away. He seemed to think his jurisdiction over animals began only after that of life ceased and failed to respond. Wednesday morning the cat persisted in an appeal to the health office. Inspector Damon was instructed to issue a requisition upon the police department for a pistol and proceeded to the house to kill the cat. As the inspector is not familiar with firearms, the officers of the board are awaiting news from the scene of slaughter.
