SATURDAY—Omaha club annual business SATURDAY—Omaha club annual business meeting, dinner for the members at 6:30.

Although the social schedule for this week is far from scant, in contrast with the crowded calendar of the last few weeks club meetings and other small affairs that prevail seem prosaic indeed. The week is not to be devoid of pretentious functions, however, for at least two large affairs are schduled, Mrs. Charles T. Kountze having issued cards for a large bridge party for one of the brides and Mrs. Thomas Creigh will also entertain a large party at bridge.

Indications are that Omaha is to be well represented at the southern resorts before Easter. To be sure, Baster sounds a long way off, but it has long been the custom of certain Omahans to start south with the first touch of severe weather and to remain there until the restrictions of the Lenten season have been removed. This year will scarcely be an exception. In fact. several people have already gone although California has attracted some that usually go to the southern resorts.

> The civic committee of the general federation, through its health committee, has commenced a campaign against tuberculosis and has issued the following circular of directions to club women: In the November Bulletin the attention

In the November Bulletin the attention of club women was called to a resolution which was passed at the blennial meeting at St. Paul, and which forms the basis of work for the health department, civics committee. The work as undertaken is designed to bring to public notice the methods of curing and preventing tuberculosis and to assist in the application of these methods. In order that the best results of co-operative action be obtained, your chairman has asked that in every state a health department being to arouse public interest in local conditions, and thus reduce the death-rate from this disease in each city and town.

It is recognized that each state has problems peculiar to itself, and, while all may co-operate along general lines, residents must study and solve the local problems. If we divide the whole country into units, and each unit, or state, does its full duty, there is no question but the health of the nation will receive an onward impetus which will bring benefit to every home. Shall we not, then, each woman.

health of the nation will receive an onward impetus which will bring benefit to every home. Shall we not, then, each woman, do her part in helping to perfect the work of her state? Now is our opportunity; let us not lose it. Let us feel that wherever we may be, on prairie, mountain, or shore, in city, village, or the home, the part we do is important, and, if left undone, will weaken the structure our sisters are tryling to build.

Annually, in the United States there are one hundred and fifty thousand deaths from tuberculosis. This is a preventable disease, to stamp out which it is only necessary that in each community the men, women and children shall be educated in its prevention and cure and shall be into men, women and children shall be educated in its prevention and cure, and shall unite their efforts to that end. This is a simple matter if every club woman does her part in this campaign of education. If each of the more than half a million women forming the membership of the General Federation declares for health and all that leads to healthful conditions in the home, the village, city and state, the problem is solved.

In each state then, let us work along the following lines:

1. Keep ever in mind that this is an educational movement, and those things which impress the facts of the curability and the preventability of tuberculosis are important factors in the movement.

2. Place the general federation wall card in buildings where persons congregate. This card seeks to impress the simple facts that with proper food, exercise, recreation, work, air, and sunshine, the system is sufficiently fortified to realst disease, and points out methods of prevention and cure of tuberculosis.

BLIZZARD TWENTY YEARS AGO Terrible Twelfth of January, 1888, in Contrast with Omaha's Mild Weather of Present.

Today is the twentleth anniversary of the famous Nebraska blizzard of 1888. W. F. Kellogg, employed at Paxton & Gallagher's, was one of the few persons who thought of it early Saturday morning. A consultation of the files of The Bee of Friday morning, January 12, 1888, shows most of the front page covered with tales of snow, extreme cold, high winds, suffering, death, obstruction of traffic and the like. Says the article:

fic and the like. Says the article:

About 3 o'clock yesterday morning a tiny flake of snow descended as a sort of advance agent for what was coming. An hour later it was descending heavily. The atmosphere was mellow and daybreak showed the sidewalks thickly coated with snow. The snow fell all day and the thermometer registered 25 degrees above zero. The wind was from the southeast, but about 4 o'clock it veered to the northwest and inaugurated one of the worst blizzards ever witnessed in Omaha.

For a few moments before the sudden squall from the northwest there was a dead calm. Then came the wind. The snow seemed to freeze as it descended. At 6 o'clock the rails of the cable line were buried under snow drifts, which quickly froze into barriers which the snow plows could not penetrate.

The article relates a number of instances

The article relates a number of instances of people being lost in the snow, runaways, exhausted horses and the like. It tells how the railroads were tied up. Dis- Favors Council Bluffs, Owing to Onepatches from Iowa, Nebraska and all through the northwest show that the blizzard was the worst in years.

The paper of the next day had almost the entire front page covered with accounts of casualties in the blizzard, children and others lost in the storm, people with feet or hands or ears frozen, carloads of stock in transit frozen and herds on the plains

The next day the tale continues telling about the temperature being at that time still 21 degrees below zero in Omaha and there is news of further snow and cold with an impending coal famine.

And now, look! With the blizzard twenty years away, Omaha in January is much like San Diego in December, or any other winter resort, or Orange Belt city.

HUNDRED THOUSAND BUSHELS

Omaha Probably Will Miss Getting This Elevator Because of Discrimination in the Shipment Over River.

Because it costs extra to ship grain from the Iowa side of the river to elevators of Omaha and costs nothing to ship from the Nebraska side to Iowa, the Weeks Grain and Live Stock company announces that the firm will build a new elevator with a capacity of 100,000 bushels and probably will build it in Council Bluffs. 'We are considering Council Bluffs be cause we can get Iowa grain to better advantage," said President Weeks. "Grain which is shipped from points in Iowa within eighty to 100 miles of Council Bluffs must come there in order to be forwarded to Chicago on the proportional rate. Many cars are shipped there from points on the Northwestern seventy-five or eighty miles the terminal, and then taken right back to Chicago over the same track, at a saving of several cents in rates. This grain could not be brought to Omaha at the same rate charged to Council Bluffs, but Nebraska grain may be shipped to Council Bluffs at the same rate as to Omaha.'

Mr. Weeks said his company had not definitely decided on a site for the new elevator, but because of the rates Council

The elevator is to be a transfer rather than a storage elevator, but will have a large capacity for such a building. Another proposition being considered by the Weeks ompany is to build an elevator with a feeding station near South Omaha.

me because their grafts were cut off by the reforms which I instituted." OUR JIM ALLE SAME BRYAN Crowned with Glory, Omaha's Mayor, Like Peerless Leader, is Much in Demand. An invitation was received Saturday by Mayor Dahlman from the Elks club of Rockford, Ill., asking him to be present and address the club at a meeting to be held March 27. The secretary says the club there has 500 members and there will be a large and appreciative audience. 'T'm getting so many dates I begin to feel like Mr. Bryan must feel flying about the country hither and thither speaking before large and enthusiastic audiences," said the mayor. "But I'm not going to lie down on the job. Yes, I have accepted the invitation of the Elks. I know they will be a jolly good bunch of fellows and I don't want to miss the opportunity of speaking to them.

PROUTY HEARS LINCOLN CASES Commercial Club of Lincoln Wants Omaha Hates from East and South.

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty will be in Lincoln next Wednesday hear two complaints which have been filed against the railroads of Nebraska The first case to be heard is that of the Lincoln Commercial club against the railroads, asking that Lincoln be put on a parity of rates with Omaha on goods from the south and east. Now the general rule for rates from the south is that rates to Lincoln are higher by the usual differentials. The other case is that of the Hayes Earnes Grain company against the Burlingurated with Bucklen's Arnica Saive. Heals coin public schools will talk of "The Child and thinks it is doubtful if she could did not appear there last year, but I was ton, asking that the Burlington be compelled to pay elevation charges on grain out of their cleaning house at Table Rock.
