AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Hog Shipments Have Been Exceptionally Heavy During Week.

SHEEP PRICES ENCOURAGING

George Harold Arrested for Passing Checks to Which He is Alleged to Have Forged the Signatures.

The week in the South Omaha market again closes with improving prospects in all classes of live stock. The prices of hogs remain low, but there is little doubt that the low prices are due not so much to the financial conditions as to the heavy shipments. The local market received nearly 70,000 in the first five days of the week. This is nearly twice as many as in the same week last year. Prices showed a tendency toward steadiness, but the heavy receipts pulled off about 10 cents during the week. The outlook for the future is bright. As soon as this run slows up a little prices are expected to advance. The hogs coming in are Nebraska raised for the greater part. The quality is good and it seems that the country has plenty of them. The high price of corn has had a tendency to send them to market as early as possible. Sheep have sold remarkably strong and active with a fair advance of prices. The old time figures were reached in a few loads of spring lambs brought a fraction over 1 cent yesterday. The run of sheep has been lighter than in previous years. The sheep men who bought at very high prices last fall are beginning to take heart again. It is likely that with improving conditions the heavy dealers will be able to realize a fair remuneration. It is not hoped that any great profit may be reaped as the prices last fall were too high.

Cattle have been coming in slowly compared to the receipts of last year. The prices have slowly improved in the main during the week.

FREE TO THE SICK

Prominent Physician Gives His Best Prescriptions to Sick People Without Charge.

Nearly all diseases or ailments have caused primarily by poor circulation of the blood—no matter whether it is the skin, or the heart, or the stomach, or liver, or what, or even as affected by poor circulation is the primary cause.

A famous physician, after years of study and experiments, has finally discovered a remedy which if used in connection with certain other well-known drugs and mixed with correct proportions, will cure the most stubborn ailments. Of course the same ingredients are not used in all diseases and it would require too much space here to give each prescription in detail, but as there is one simple principle involved in all diseases so there is one basic remedy in all these prescriptions, namely: Concentrated Lacto Compound. This remedy is as its name implies a concentration of the most valuable agents known to science for stimulating the circulation thus striking at the root of the evil.

The doctor has arranged with the manufacturers of Concentrated Lacto Compound to enclose with each package of their preparation a full series of his original prescriptions in detail so that any sick person will secure free of charge exactly the same formula that the doctor would give if he called at his office.

The prescriptions run through various formulas for kidney and heart troubles, stomach and bowel troubles, malaria and liver troubles, blood and skin diseases, and if you get a one-ounce bottle of Lacto at the drug store usually cost about 50 cents, you can readily select the proper prescription for your ailment and mix the medicine yourself.

All ingredients prescribed by the doctor are vegetable and non-poisonous. If your druggist is unable to supply Concentrated Lacto in his name on Newark N. J. and you will be promptly advised where it can be secured.

three forged checks for $10 each. The arrest was made by P. H. Shields, who also filed the complaint. Harold was arraigned before Judge Callahan and waived his preliminary hearing. He was bound over to the district court in $500 bonds. He used his father's name on the checks. He is a young man, not over 30 years old. He made little explanation of the case except that he wanted some spending money and took that means to get it. Young Harold was the star witness for the state in the trial of Frank Noonan for the murder of Charles Carlson two years ago.

Judge Callahan had several cases of petty larceny to deal with yesterday morning. William Langley was sentenced to a term of ten days for taking coat, James Lewis and L. Russell five days each for taking grain. The coal and grain belonged to the railroad company.

Sunday Services.
Rev. Andrew Renwick will preach from the topic, "Come and See," Sunday morning. His evening theme will be "Forming habits." The church, through the efforts of the women, has been provided with new seats and furniture.

The First Presbyterian church will observe holy communion in the morning hour. In the evening Dr. R. L. Wheeler will speak on the subject, "If it be in vain."

Politics Warming Up.
Politics in South Omaha begins to rank foremost on the curbstone cushions and other places where men congregate. Two candidates filed yesterday. H. W. Murphy for the republican, filed for the office of city attorney. He was the republican candidate last year and is up ready for the second battle, cheerful and smiling. J. J. Gillin, for the democrats, filed for the office of city clerk, which position he now fills. He was the first candidate to file. It is said that Frank Koutsky has declined to run as candidate for mayor on the republican ticket. Talk is directed toward many candidates for all positions, but as yet the actual candidates little is definitely known. A meeting has been called by the democrats for Saturday evening at the Workmen temple. These are democrats who are interested in the nomination of an anti-administration ticket. An effort will be made to secure the promise of E. B. Towl to accept the nomination.

Magic City Gossip.

Mount Calvary commandery No. 1 entertained Right Eminent Sir Elias W. Beightol, Grand commander of the Knights Templar of Nebraska, Friday night at the Masonic temple. He, with his associates, is making an official visit to that order. A reception was held in the parlors of the temple, after which an elaborate banquet was served. Music was furnished by an orchestra of ten pieces. Sir Knight A. Hugh Hippie presided as toastmaster and the following toasts were responded to: "The Grand Commandery," Elias W. JUNIOR PROM IS A SUCCESS

Large Attendance and Evening Proves to Be a Most Pleasant One.

One of the important high school functions of the year, the junior prom, occurred at Chambers' academy Friday evening, and was a brilliant success. The hall was skillfully decorated in purple and white, and 90 percent were everywhere in evidence. A large electric sign showing the class numerals was also a feature of the decorations, and one corner of the hall was cozily arranged with portiers and pillows. Although the dance was well attended, the floor was not over-crowded at any time.

Dainty programs and delicious punch added to the enjoyment of the evening. Herbert W. Ryan headed the committee in charge.

RAILROAD CALLS CONFERENCE

Omaha Road Asks All Branches of the Service to Attend the Meeting.

HERMAN, Neb., Jan. 11.—(Special Telegram.)—General Manager Trenholm of the Omaha system has called a meeting of all employees at Sioux City January 13, to discuss cutting down expenses. Several other important matters will come up between Mr. Trenholm and the employees and it is thought this will give all concerned a chance to give their side to the wage question, and also promote a better feeling between the officials and the men. Employees, including the station forces, that can get away, will go and take part.

BURLINGTON IS CONSOLIDATING

Branch Lines Are Being Formally Incorporated into the System.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Burlington road, held Friday in the office of Auditor W. P. Durkee of the Burlington in Omaha, thirty-seven branch railroads, part of the Burlington system, were bought by the Burlington road. This move was simply a formality, as the Burlington has practically owned all the lines since they were built. As these branches were built each was given a separate name and a separate list of officers and the road was leased to the Burlington. They are now owned by the Burlington.

TAFT MAKES TALK ON LABOR

Secretary of War Addresses People's Institute in New York.

ORIGIN OF PROPERTY TRACED

Injunction is Necessary Legal Principle, but Law Should Be Amended to Prevent Its Abuse.

NEW YORK, Jan. 11.—For the first time since he became a recognized candidate for the republican presidential nomination, Secretary of War William H. Taft last night faced a New York audience, set forth in detail his stand on the pertinent question of the relative interests and rights of labor and capital, and in turn submitted to a rapid-fire attack from an audience, which quizzed him keenly and in a somewhat controversial spirit, according to the practice of the People's Institute, whose guest he was. The secretary proved equally effective in attack and defense and his prompt and forcible replies and occasional witty sallies evoked the same demonstration of approval as greeted the salient points of his address.

Not less than 2,000 persons, its capacity, had crowded the Cooper Union when police reserves were summoned to clear the walks in front of the buildings, where 1,000 or more, disappointed in not having gained entrance, had congregated.

As the not-to-be-mistaken form of the secretary of war made his way through the throng, a shout of "three cheers for the next president" was the signal for a noisy ovation, that continued until Mr. Taft bowed his acknowledgments from the platform.

People's Institute audiences, which have the unique distinction of being democratic and fashionable, discriminating and cordial, usually bring together intellectual leaders in all walks of life, and tonight's gathering was a typical one. At least a third of the audience were women. When Charles Sprague Smith, who presided, suggested the unique distinction of being democratic and fashionable, discriminating and cordial, usually bring together intellectual leaders in all walks of life, and tonight's gathering was a typical one. At least a third of the audience were women. When Charles Sprague Smith, who presided, suggested Interdependence of People.

In his prepared address the secretary pointed out the dependence, one upon the other, of capital and labor. He declared that the aggregation of wealth properly employed widened the field of labor and were to be welcomed, while wealth improperly used was to be condemned. He advocated unionism insofar as it is the result of the co-operation made for the common good.

Opening his speech with the statement that he would ask the audience to give their attention to "the subject of labor and capital, their common interests, their necessary co-operation, and the legal remedies for their abuses," Secretary Taft traced the "origin of the institution of property," and the interdependence of property and capital and labor from their earliest days, and the principles that lead to the accumulation of capital in the world.

"Labor needs capital to secure the best production," said Mr. Taft, "while capital needs labor in producing anything. The division of labor is not a bad thing. It is affected not exactly, but in a general way by the amount of capital in use as compared with the number of those who labor. The more capital in use, the more work there is to do, and the more there is to do, the more employment is needed. Manifestly, it is in the direct interest of the laborer that capital shall increase faster than the number of those who work. Nothing is so likely to make wealth idle as to increase the amount of property. It follows, as a necessary conclusion, that to destroy the guarantees of property is a direct blow at the interest of the workingman."

Division of Production.

"What it is in the common interest of labor and capital to increase the fruits of production, yet in determining the share of each in the product, their interests are plainly opposed. Though the law of supply and demand will doubtless in the end be the most potent influence in fixing the division, yet during the gradual adjustment to the changing markets and varying financial conditions capital will surely have the advantage unless labor takes united action. During the betterment of business conditions, organized labor, if acting with real promptness in the advancement of wages than if he were left to the slower operation of natural laws, and in the same way, as hard times come on the too eager employer may be restrained from undue haste in reducing wages. The organization of capital into corporations with the position of advantage which this gives it in a dispute with single laborers over wages, makes absolutely necessary for labor to unite to maintain itself.

Unions Have Come to Stay.
"What the capitalist, who is the employer of labor must face," he continued, "is that the organization of labor—the union—is the only remedy needed in the industrial world. It has come to stay. If the employer would consult his own interest he must admit this and act on it. Under existing conditions the blindest course that an employer of labor can pursue is to decline to recognize labor unions as the controlling influence in the labor market and to insist upon dealing only with his particular employees. The time has passed in which that attitude can be assumed with any hope of successfully maintaining it."

"What the wise managers of corporate enterprise employing large numbers of laborers will do is to receive the leaders of labor unions with courtesy and respect and listen to their claims and arguments. They would do to the managers of any other corporation enterprise with whom they were to make an important contract affecting the business between them. At times some labor leaders are intoxicated among the employees of labor unions in representing thousands of their fellow workers and are weak enough to exhibit a spirit of arrogance. Dealing with them is trying to the patience of the employer. So, too, propositions from labor unions sometimes are so extravagant in respect to the terms of employment as literally to deprive the manager of the control which he ought to retain over the laborers employed in his business. This is to be expected in a comparatively new movement and is not to be made a ground for condemning it."

"On the other hand the arrogance is not confined to one side. We all of us know that there are a number of employers who have the spirit of intolerance and sense of power because of their immense resources, and that their attitude is neither conciliatory nor likely to lead to an adjustment of differences. The wise men among the employers of labor and labor leaders are those who discard all appearance of temper or sense of power and attempt by courteous consideration and calm discussion to reach a common ground."

Violence or other form of lawlessness on behalf of a labor union properly merits and receives the sharpest condemnation from the public, and is quite likely to lose the cause of labor its support in the particular controversy."

Abuse of Combinations.
The "abuse of capital combinations," industrial and railroad—were discussed at length and the relation of wage earners thereto pointed out.

"The maintenance of such unlawful monopolies," said Mr. Taft, "is for the purpose of keeping up the prices of the necessities of life, and thus necessarily reduces the purchasing power of the wages which the wage earners receive. This is a serious detriment to them and a real corporate abuse and sympathy with such effort to stamp them out. It is not that they should sympathize with an effort to destroy such great corporate enterprises, because they employ enormous numbers of wage earners and lawfully and normally increase the capital from which the wage fund is drawn, but they should vigorously maintain the policy of the government in bringing these great corporate enterprises within the law and requiring them to conduct their business in accordance with the statutes of their country."

"In rare instances corporate managers have entered into a course of violence to maintain their side of a labor controversy. They have justified it on the ground that they were simply fighting fire with fire and that if the labor union proceeded to use dynamite they would use dynamite in return. I cannot too strongly condemn this course of this argument. No amount of lawlessness on the part of the labor striker will justify the lawlessness on the part of the employers. Such a course means a recurrence of civil war and anarchy."

"A second abuse which employers are sometimes guilty of is what is technically known as 'blacklisting.' This is unlawful and should be condemned."

Violence and Boycott Condemned.
Mr. Taft condemned the "abuse of labor" such as violence, intimidation and the boycott, and pointed out the legal remedies by which a person may be protected against the illegal acts of combinations of capital and combinations of labor. "In cases of unlawful combinations of capital, as well as of such combinations of labor," he said, "the method in equity by securing an injunction seems to be preferred by those who are about to be injured." He defended the injunction against the criticism that it places in the hands of a judge legislative, judicial and executive powers and declared that "prevention is better than cure." He granted the contention, he said, that the injunction had been abused in labor disputes, and favored the amendment of the law to provide that no temporary restraining order should issue until after notice and a hearing, also requiring a different judge in contempt proceedings from the judge issuing the injunction.

"There is a class of capitalists who look upon labor unions as per se vicious and a class of radical labor unionists who look upon capital as labor's natural enemy," declared Mr. Taft in closing. "I believe, however, that the great majority of each class is gradually becoming more conciliatory in its attitude, the one toward the other. Between this is a larger class, neither capitalist nor labor unionist, who are without prejudices and I hope I am one of those. The effects of the panic are not over. We must expect industrial depression. This may be fruitful of labor controversies. I earnestly hope that a more conservative and conciliatory attitude on both sides may avoid disastrous struggles of the past."

WEBSTER CITY, Ia., Jan. 11.—(Special Telegram.)—Secretary Taft goes into the republican national convention with sufficient votes to nominate he will never get the nomination. "Unless Taft goes into the convention with the nomination secured, he will never get it." The Nebraska thinks the outlook for democratic success the best it has ever been.
