Pioneer of Omaha and One of Its Most Interesting Characters.

STROKE OF PARALYSIS FATAL

For Many Years Was Leading Figure in the Political Life of the City, but Recently Had Practically Retired.

Judge I. S. Hascall died Friday morning at I o'clock at St. Joseph's hospital. The funeral services will be held Sunday at Masonic temple, with interment at Forest Lawn cemetery.

Judge Hascall had been a prominent figure in politics in Omaha and the state felly, ever since he came here in 1865. Within these forty-three years he has served as county judge, member of the constitutional convention, state senator, member of the city council and for a short time was acting governor of the state. His unique perconsility and strong characteristics made him an unusual figure. For a number of bluff east of Riverview park. He was born March 8, 1831, in Erie county, New York. His father, Jonathan Hascall, was a presidential elector from New York in 1846. The son studied in the public schools and read taw with Judge Lorenzo Morris. He was admitted to the bar in Buffalo. N. Y., in 1863. In the fall of 1854 he decided to start out into the west to seek his fortune. This was soon after the great '69 excitement in California. He went first to Fort Riley, Kan., where he stayed during the winter of 1854-55. In the spring the latter year he went up into the Little Blue country and later returned to Atchison, Kan, where he practiced law four years.

Pushes on West. He then determined to push farther into the great west, though it was then in-fested with Indians and overrun with lawless white men. He secured transportation to Denver and there organized a train for Dick Darling, afterward of Omaha, was one of the men whom he took with him on this trip and from him he first heard of Omaha. It was a long and very perilous trip from Denver across the Laramie plains to Oregon. Part of his baggage was a great box filled with law trip he clung to that box, though other trains were driven to such straits that they dropped even log chains and all heavy things that could possibly be dispensed with. Many times the Indians attacked him and he had a number of very narrow

He finally went to San Francisco and from their back to New York by way of the isthmus. There he joined his wife who had returned to her old home when he started from Kansas for the west. He was dis-satisfied, however, with the east and he Friday night in the First Presbyterian 1865. Owing to the boom that was on then he found it difficult to secure a house but finally purchased a building at Fifteenth of eight points, Miss Anna McClelland sectionally purchased a building at Fifteenth of eight points, Miss Anna McClelland sectionally purchased a building at Fifteenth of eight points, and R. Enters Politics at Once. His identity with politics began almost with the day of his coming to the city, for he was appointed county judge to fill out the term of Judge Dickinson, who had died. The following year he was elected to the office. He was afterward a member of the constitutional convention and cast the deciding vote in the senate on the constitutional provision regarding the negro, under which Nebraska was made a state. He was elected to the senate again in 1869 and was in that body when it impeached Governor Butler in 1870. He was acting governor of the state for a short time in the early days. In city politics he has been a power and has often been referred to as "boss" of

> The first year he was in the council he secured the building of the big Jackson street sewer. He was a man most remarkable for his thorough knowledge of the property in the city. He had a perfect mental picture of any lot that might be mentioned. He gained a reputation also for doing things and for sterling honesty. None could excell him in shrewdness, but he was as generous as he was shrewd. He conducted extensive speculations in real estate chiefly in the south part of the city. He has left a permanent monument in the foundation for a million-dollar hotel or castle which he had projected. The foundations still exist, embracing an area of more than a block just north of the Vinton Street park. People have named it "Hascall's

Retires from Active Life.

Of late years Judge Hascall has not been very active either in politics or his profession. He retired a number of years ago to his little house on the bluff and devoted most of his time to reading and study, of which he was fond. He also wrote some. When Mrs. Hascall left the judge after but a brief period as his wife and comparlon, she informed him she did so with no intention of returning and she kept her word. What property the judge left, which was not considerable, went to Mrs. Willtams, his daughter. Some weeks ago, while he was in possession of all his faculities, he summoned his daughter and witnesses and the proper legal authority to his bedside and there made out the necessary papers that transferred to Mrs. Williams all his earthly possessions and bound them safe from attachment by Mrs. Hascall, should she seek to assert a claim. As far as known Judge Hascall did not affiliate with any religious denomination. Discussing his beliefs once he said: "There are so many 'isms' that I could not decide on any one of them." He was a close student of the Bible, however. About sixty of the former and present directors and executive officers of the Omaha Young Men's Christian association celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the founding of that institution Friday night around the banquet tables in the Young Men's Christian association building. The widows of the first members of the board of directors which was elected forty years ago last night were invited and were his solitary life. Several weeks ago he was all present. They are Mesdames Watson B. Smith, J. D. Detwiller, George Groff and B. C. Wade, and also Mrs. William Fanning, whose husband was a member of the first board.

John L. Kennedy presided as toastmastar and was introduced by T. J. Wallace, He started the program with a neat speech.

He said: The men who have built up this associa tion have been sustained and encouraged by the women at home, and the man who believes any great and good work can suc-ceed without woman's support will find he is mistaken.

Four Historical Chapters.

The historical part of the program was divided into four sections, comprising ten years each. William Fleming covered the ten years from 1868 to 1878, A. G. Charlton from 1878 to 1888, W. H. Russell from 1888 to 1898 and Dr. W. O. Henry from 1898 to

The call was in the newspaper on November 22, 1867, for a meeting in Vischer's block in room 8. The first devotional exercises were conducted by John D. Detwiler. January 1, 1868, the association was incorporated with thirty members. Of the thirty members William Fleming is the only one living continuously in the city. The winter of 1868-9 was a hard one on the poor and the association was very active in the direction of giving ald, and was a factor in the organization of the Ladies' Relief society, which flourished for a great many years and was the charitable organization of the city and did effective and influential work.

W. H. Russell said:

Every man in those days felt like an office in the Young Men's Christian association was a bore. I was elected treasurer in 1886, and the first thing I got was a bunch of bills. Our credit was a minus quantity, and the hard times of 1892-4 found us in mighty bad shape. But the association was composed of men who knew not the word fail, and this structure stands as a monument to their perseverence.

Dr. W. O. Henry was called away before his turn and was unable to deliver his W. H. Russell said: his turn and was unable to deliver his

At the close of the program Dr. Wadsworth presented to the winners of first and second places the prizes offered by the other buildings of greater cost and finer architecture and furnishings? He said: In those days when this association was started Omaha was the last place to get a drink on the way west. We had a strong class of people here who had been tried in fire as it were. Never was better work done by a Young Men's Christian association. It was made up of men and women, and its work reached all classes, such as the boatamen, the men in jail, men in boarding houses and travelers. Omaha was the first headquarters of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, furnished the first international secretary and did the first railroad Young Men's Christian association work. Omaha should and likely will be the first Young Men's Christian association city in the country. It is located in the center of a territory that feeds the world, and its influence can be made to be felt to the four corners of this country.
