Socialists Roused to Fury.

Horr Keth, conservative, aroused an uprearious tumult among the socialists when he asserted that the leaders of that party were most prominent by their absence from the streets during the demonstrations which they had misled others into undertaking, even advising the participants to take their wives and children with them as of "vagabound, slanderer, liar, scoundrel Cambridge in the evening at an Omaha and hypogrite" greet Keth.

The tumult last for several minutes, During it Herr Bebel, the socialist leader advanced to the tribune and shricked at Herr Keth:

You miserable rascal," while Herr Stadthagen, socialist democrat, called him a "vulgar vagabound," and "police spy." The proddent of the house made various attempts to restore order but in vain. Among cries of "Get down from the trip Herr Keth concluded his remarks sune," by saying:

"I propose an encounter with Herr Stadthagen at which the police shall not be present."
