SECRET PLOTS UNCOVERED

Revelations Expected at Trial of Franz von Veltheim.

SOLLY JOEL, THE DIAMOND KING

Favorite Nephew of Late Barney Barnato Involved in Legal Tangle Soon Coming Up.

LONDON, Feb. 8 .- (Special.) -All England is expectantly awaiting the coming trial of Franz von Veltheim, the daring soldier of fortune who has been called "the prince of adventurers." As readers already know, Von Veithelm is charged by Solly Joel with an attempt at blackmailing. Von Velthelm was arrested in Paris, extradited and after a preliminary hearing a few days ago, was held for trial at the New Bailey. Soily Joel is chief of South African multi-millionaires, head of Barnato Bros. and the De Beers diamond mines-a veritable king of diamonds. England is awaiting the coming fight to a finish between these two strong mon with intense interest because of the extraordinary and sensational secrets which the testimony promises to reveal. At the preliminary hearing the defense did not disclose its hand-no witnesses were called, in fact. But there was a hasty drawing aside of the curtain in the cross-examination questions which gave an insight into what is to come. Thus it was revealed that there is a mysterious young girl in the case. Her identity is hidden under the name of "Kismet." It is known that she was heautiful and the daughter of one of the best families in South Africa. It is asserted, too, that she had friendly relations with the Barnato firm and motives of hatred against Solly Joel. Despite her youth she is said to have been a political spy. In the troublous times in Johannesburg murders and audden deaths, this girl was found dead in bed, on the very morning she was to have given testimony in the trial of Von Veltheim for the killing of Woolf Joel, brother of Soily. Von Veltheim was acquitted of the charge of murder after a three-minute deliberation of the jury Plot Against Boers.

The principal sensation of the coming trial, however, is expected to be the revelations concerning a secret plot to overthrow the Boer government. A former plot, the well-known Jameson raid, is said to have been engineered by the Barnatos and Joel. Solly Joel was not one of the actual raiders but was a member of the reform committee, was later arrested, jailed and in peril of his life, being saved at the eleventh hour by Barney Barnato.

Von Veltheim will claim that he was employed by Barney Barnato on a secret political mission at a salary of $5,000 per month and unlimited expenses, and that his demand on Solly Joel for $80,000 is not blackmail, but a business request for money properly due to him. Von Velthelm will also charge Joel with prosecuting him in revenge for the death of his brother. with sending Von Veltheim an infernal machine which almost killed him and with causing tife burning to the ground of the hotel in which Von Veltheim lay helpicasly

The Joel batteries will hurl many more accusations against the soldier of fortune than the one charge of blackmail. In Solly Joel's affidavit, on which the Parisian extradition was secured, he charges Von Veltheim with being among other things a murderer, bigimist and deserter.

There are South Africans in London today claiming to know who declare that Joel's life if Von Velthelm is sent to the penitentiary. The adventurer has a memory, is a hale and hearty giant physically, and even after a ten years' sentence probably would seek his revenge. There are others again who declare that Joel is so strenuously prosecuting because he realizes that theim is only awaiting his opportunity. They say that Joel finds it necessary to be the cause celebre of the year.

Wears Woman's Boquet.

Solly Joel was, and still is, noted for two things. One is the curl be wears in the center of his forehead, the other the boquet of roses he always wears in his coat. He is probably the only man in the world who wears a woman's boquet for a bouttonniere. One rose, perhaps two buds, is conventional, but Solly wears five or six full blown and expensive roses. His curl he carefully cultivates and wears his hat on the back of his head, so that all can see and admire this hirsute adornment. For the rest of him, he is just over 50, five feet

It is nothing less than the solution of the spinster problem in England by providing superfluous womankind with a profitable outlet for their talents and energies in came to England, where he has lived for light agricultural pursuits. Mrs. Woodhull says that she and her daughter have long been convinced that the true future of the race lay on the land but they have realized the futility of many of the "back to the land" experiments, because they left out of account the deadly nonotony and isolation of modern village life, which makes it impossible for people of culture and intellectual tastes. The movement which they have now inaugurated aims not only to bring the people back to the land, but to surround them with all the refinements and advantages of modern civilization. For something more than a year the experiment has been in progress. In 1905 it became possible for Miss Woodhull to devote her beautiful estate of more than 1,000 acres and a magnificent old manor house at Bredon's Norton, Worcestershire, to the work which she and her mother had been planning for years before. The idea which she is carrying out there is the agricultural education of women on scientific lines, but this is only part of the general educative movement which it is expected will grow and early this year the Women's International club will be formally opened, and the control of the estate will pass finally into its hands. Farming for Women. The aim of the club is to combine scienific agricultural training with practical farming of the kind which women can do. Eventually the estate will be divided into small holdings for fruit growing, poultry raising, bee keeping, market gardening and dairy farming. At present the Manor house has from twenty-five to thirty students from Bredon's Norton. Already the undertaking has passed the experimental stage, who are studying agriculture under the direction of experts. Bredon's Norton a few years ago was one of the sleepiest and most backward villages in England. Today it is equipped with a telephone exchange in communication with the trunk lines and connected with all the business and intellectual centers in England. Motor cars dash about and a constant stream of visitors is coming and going to and from the Manor house. The village is only eleven miles from Cheltenham, which not only affords an excellent market for the high-class agricultural products of the lady students and gardeners, but is also one of the English centers of education. Music, the theater, lectures and all the other advantages of civilization have been brought almost to the very door of these women who have decided to give up the hurry and hustle of the town and lead the natural and isurely life of the country. At present the Manor house will accommodate about fifty students, but as the cheme grows in popularity cottages will erected on the estate, which will accommodate almost an unlimited number. Are rangements have also been made by which students and their male relatives can live in the village, so that the advantages of family life are also preserved. Meets Objection of Discipline.

The club idea is designed to meet the objection which so many grown up people have to the discipline of a school or col-
