TRIPLE-DECK SHEEP CARS

Innovation Adopted by the Union Pacific as Experiment.

GROWS OUT OF CHEYENNE MEET

Peared by Some the Cars Will Prove Top-Heavy and Dangerous in Making the Sharp Curves in Lines.

To handle sheep with greater speed over growded railroad the Union Pacific is experimenting with triple-deck stock cars. At the conference in Cheyenne last March between a committee of forty members of the National and Wyoming Wool Growers' association and an equal number of the leading officials of twelve of the leading western railroads, the sheepmen suggested a three-deck car for handling sheep. The Union Pacific is the first road to take up with the suggestion, the officials realising that it is a scheme which is at least worth giving a trial.

It is feared by some that the cars will prove topheavy and there will be danger in rounding sharp curves at high rate of speed, but as the statistics of the Department of Agriculture show that the average speed of stock trains in 1907 was only 9.2 miles per hour, there is little danger of the three-decked cars leaving the track. It is also argued that if the three-deck cars are adopted, all loading and unloading chutes will have to be changed, and at heavy expense to the railroads, but as the railroads will be the gainer by the third deck in revenue, it is not anticipated that the necessity of changing the chutes will deter the railroads in using three-deck cars for sheep if there were no other draw-

NEED OF STRICT MUNICIPAL LAW

Firemen Generally Handicapped in Structures Over 150 Feet in Height-Government Engineer Talks.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, March 12 .- (Special.) Catastrophes such as those at Collinwood, O., and Boyertown, Pa., are possible in States, according to Richard L. Humphrey, engineer in charge of the structural ma- away in safety with the facilities now exist- his marriage to Anna M. Pedersen. They terials laboratories of the government. He ing. declares it is providential that more of these holocausts have not occurred. Mr. Humphrey, in his official capacity, in charge of the structural material investigations being conducted by the technologic branch of the United States geological survey, has made a thorough study of fireproofing and is therefore well qualified to speak on this subject. He says:

"The shocking catastrophe at Collinwood O., last Wednesday which sent a thrill of horror into every home in the country, did not result from exceptional conditions, but conditions that are to be found in thou-States. The same or even worse fire traps own safety against fire. prevail in every village and town, and, indeed, in many of the large cities. Even where municipal laws are supposed to govern the erection of such structures the ing equipment for fighting fires, while forconditions are often worse than in Collin- eign countries spend their money in buildwood. Such calamities as we have had the lng structures which offer the greatest few months of this year do not come as resistance to fire. The pere capita loss in a matter of surprise to anyone versed in this country yearly exceeds $3, against an the subject. The only surprise is that these annual loss in twnty-one of the principal catastrophes do not occur frequently throughout this great country.

Fireproof Structures Needed. "The newspapers are now filled with statements made by school officials, calling attention to the necessity of fire drillsthat these fire drills will prevent the loss of life from fire. Necessary and excellent as they are in their place, nothing could be more fallacious than such a general proposition. What is needed, as has been repeatedly pointed out, is the erection of structures which have the greatest resistance to fire. From what I can learn the fire drill at Collinwood had started but the school building was such a fitmey tinder box that the fire traveled through the hallways and up the stairs faster than any possible fire drill. In such a building and there are many of them, the fire will always win the race over the frantic children. Had the interior of the Collinwood school been reasonably fireproof the loss of life would have been very much less "Laws should be enacted to prohibit the erection of anything except a structure of the highest fire resisting type, especially when it is to be used as a school, hospital, theater or other structure in which people assemble in large numbers, who in the event of a great fire, such as happened at Collinwood, would be to a certain extent helpless. In our hospitals and public schools it would appear unwise to erect structures of more than two stories in height. In such buildings, in addition to wide stairways, I would have one or two chutes or tubes leading from the top story to the ground. These would prove not only such safer than fire escapes, but also a much more rapid means of exit.

Height of Buildings. "The question of the height of buildings the same cage. Hamlin's sentence expired York? If so, a most important matter and the character of the interior strucmuch to municipal structures as any other class of buildings. It is a fact that the proof.

"While the relative fire-resisting qualities of fire-proof materials is not yet entirely established, it is a fact that these propessies are sufficiently well known to permit the erection of reasonably fireproof structures. Yet in the face of all this buildings are constantly being erected with materials known not to possess an adequate resistance to fire, and these buildings are a menace to the cities in which they are erected.

"The city of New York is full of firetraps and it is a miracle that a great fire has not wiped out the greater part of the business district.

Strict Municipal Laws. "The remedy for these conditions is not in elaborate systems for fighting fire or any elaborate fire drills which may or may not be effectively carried out, but in theenactment of strict municipal laws compelling the erection of structures entirely fire-proofed with materials of the highest quality, and especially in the prevention of the erection of filmsy structures, where women and children gather in large number, as, for example, schools, as for expamle in the city of New York, has been dmonstrated to be one of the very gives rise to many problems. One of the most important is the question of handling and its increased use will add materially through the streets the immense population crowded in a very small district. As this congestion increases through the erection of these great buildings, it will be necessary in the near future to double-deck the streets in order to accommodate this immense population and also to multiply the present transportation facilities. It is apparent, therefore, that a great calamity in the shape of a fire such as visited Bahimore and San Francisco, must necessarily many people who would be unable to get

"Bulldings should not be erected so high as to prevent the fire department from fighting a blaze in the upper parts of such structures, unless these buildings are supplied with fire-fighting apparatus of their own, capable of taking care of any fire beyond the reach of the firemen. At present the average fire department is helpless or seriously handicapped in successfully coping with the fire in a building over 150 feet high. This means that the firemen can take care of the first fifteen stories of a skyscraper. Beyond that, the tall sands of instances throughout the United buildings will have to look out for their
