The recent referendum on the subject of summer base ball at Amherst, Williams and Wesleyan probably was a surprise to ments of professors in those institutions was all against that form of athletic amusement. In all three institutions the their academic standing right. Coming at meeting. a time when Cornell has declared most emphatically against summer base ball and the entrance of its athletes into professional sport of any sort, the difference of opinion is all the more marked. The three New England colleges named are in harmony with the sentiment at Brown, which some seasons ago recorded itself in pets with his purer brother. Now, as a standard for the athletic requirement.

The vote, it must be understood, has no significance other than showing a decided sentiment on the part of a majority of the students of the three colleges in favor of he has ample opportunities for taking part summer base ball. It is not unreasonable in the game. The professional sprinter, the to suppose that the college athletic authorities will pay heed to the student sentiment so expressed. At Williams in particular feeling was very strong on the subject of student thought wanted it expressly understood outside the college that the matter of shortening schedules and prohibiting mmer base ball was entirely a matter of faculty sentiment. They wanted to offset advertising of Williams as in favor of all sorts of changes in the rules of athtletics, which, although favored by the faculty, were not at all desired by the students. The votes at the three colleges resulted as follows: Williams, 237 to 37; Amherst, 237 to 66; Wesleyan, 118 to 67-all in favor of summer base ball. In other words, in these meetings 13 per cent of the Williams men were in favor of restricting the game, is per cent of the Amherst men voted that way and 36 per cent of the Wesleyan men. About one-fifth of all the men in the three colleges who attended the meetings were in favor of making summer base ball playing an offense. At Wealeyan, where the vote against summer base ball was strongsst, the discussion was somewhat restricted in tone because of the fact in large measfor the abolition of summer base ball.
