Distinctive Styles in Easter Millinery

The week before Easter, no doubt, finds many women who haven't purchased their Easter hat. These are busy days in the millinery, and we advise all who can to come as early in the week as possible in order that the Easter hat shall be ready. There is most every wanted style and color, but the most striking feature of the hats this season is their wearableness. Descriptions are futile. Every woman must see the showing for herself. No two hats are alike, but the idea back of all seems a tendency toward greater femininity and

There are roses everywhere, dainty buds, moss roses, June roses and great clusters of roses to droop over the hair, and the effects are surprisingly

Then there are the all black hats. Not mourning hats-far from it! But exquisite combinations of blacks, the airy black of sheer straw, the feathery black of aigrettes, the soft black of plumes, the deep rich black of velvet ribbons, the brilliant black of jet. Very dashing are these black hats, and the very latest note of this year's smartness. Miss Dettmer, chief of our designing staff, has just returned from the east, where she viewed fashion's very newest Easter creations. As a result our work room will contribute to our Easter showing more liberally than ever, with many rich and handsome models.

It is understood that Mr. Hill's subject will lead him into a discussion of the competitive relations between the railroads and canals of this country. Mr. Hill is one of five distinguished citizens who have been personally invited to attend the con ference. The others are Grover Cleveland, William J. Bryan, John Mitchell and Andrew Carnegie. These guests, with the governors of the states, will be entertained by President Roosevelt at a dinner on the evening of May 12. The sessions will begin the following morning. The plan is to hold two sessions a day for three days. President Roosevelt will open the conference with an address and he is also expected to preside at each session if not throughout each session. The meetings will be held in the east room of the White House. Indications already are that the room will be crowded. Each governor will be attended by three delegates and some forty great national organizations will be represented.
