King Manuel proceeded to the Cortes, accompanied by many dignitaries of state and escorted by a strong guard of troops. His majesty slowly mounted the tribune that had been especially erected for his use. His address, which he read in strong and full tones, not unlike those of his father, was a pathetic and at the same time a practical and vigorous discourse, calculated to win the sympathy of the people. He touched upon the tragedy of February 1, when his father and his brother were shot down as "the cruel disappearance of my father and

Counsel for the complainants called on Brown Pushing Injunction Bitt. Mr. Jerome for the evidence taken by the Senator Brown will appear before the grand juries during the insurance investijudiciary committee of the senate tomorgation, but Mr. Jerome stated that no tesrow in behalf of his bill to take away from timony in relation to insurance matters the federal courts their right to enjoin was spread on the minutes of any of the state taxes. While he believes that he will secure a favorable report on the measure. he is leaving no stone unturned to meet the objections of the lawyers on the committee as to its constitutionality and its feasibility. He has spent considerable time on his argument and hopes to write the report from it.
