Jury is Dismissed

After being out for several hours the jury in the suit of little Moore against the Dresden Tailoring company was dismissed by Judge Day without reaching a verdict. Mrs. Moore claimed some carpenters working on the Dresden building had allowed a plank to fall through the window of the room occupied by her son, who was working.

She says the board struck her hand, injuring it permanently, and she demanded $5,000. The Dresden company denied all responsibility, declaring it had no carpenters at work when the accident happened. After the twenty-four-hour session the jury was so evenly divided a verdict seemed impossible, so Judge Day let it go.

CAMPFIRE SPANISH VETERANS

Interesting Program of Music and Speeches to Follow by a Feed and a Smoker.

The first annual campfire and smoker of Camp Lee Forby, Spanish-American war veterans, was held last evening in the armory, the old market house building, Fourteenth street and Capitol avenue. The big room was filled with veterans of the war, both citizens and members of the regular army, and there was an excellent program, followed with refreshments and smoking.

A galling gun-posted in front of the armory announced to everybody within hearing distance that there was "something doing." Buglers, also, went about the neighboring streets sounding an additional martial note.

There was an excellent program in the armory, opened with the sound of the call to arms and the assembly call by the buglers. The audience, led by the South Side quartet, sang "The Star Spangled Banner." E. W. Cook, commander of the post, presided. He introduced the speakers of the evening, W. S. Summers and General P. A. Berry, who reviewed the career of the Nebraska boys in the Spanish-American war and the enviable record made by them.

The South Side quartet sang "Doc" Clark was repeatedly cheered when he gave some banjo solos, and the Hackford brothers contributed several songs.

The platform was handsomely decorated with American and captured Spanish flags. There was also a large portrait of Colonel J. M. Stotsenburg and Captain Lee Forby.

After the program the mess call was sounded and refreshments were served. Clay pipes, especially made for the occasion, were passed around and followed by large quantities of tobacco. Then everybody smoked and visited.

A number of applications were received for membership in the camp.

CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Members Take Still Another Tack on Question of Vaccination.

REVERSE ACTION OF COMMITTEE

Matter Now Stands Just Where It Was and Children Not Vaccinated Cannot Attend the Public Schools at Any Time.

Once more the city council changes face.

By a vote of 6 to 5 the council Tuesday night rescinded its action of Monday afternoon in session as a committee of the whole and rejected the report of the committee that Rule 21 of the health ordinances, making vaccination compulsory, be repealed. Bedford, Brucker, Davis, Elmsasser, Hanson and McGovern voted to reject the report, and Funkhouser, Jackson, Sheldon, Johnson and Zimmerman voted to accept the report or repeal the compulsory law.

Elmsasser started the ball by moving that the report be rejected and offering to amend the ordinance providing that if epidemic infectious disease or person, to attend any such school who has not been at least once successfully vaccinated. Zimmerman contested the motion on the ground that it was unfair to bring up the matter again after it had been thoroughly discussed and the committee had reported and the school authorities, physicians, members of the anti-vaccination league and citizens had been heard and it had been agreed to repeal the rule. Later Elmsasser withdrew his amendment, stating he would reintroduce it in committee of the whole.

At the meeting Monday afternoon Zimmerman was the only one who voted against the repealing of Rule 21.

Graham, owner of the garage on Nineteenth and Farnam streets, appeared before the council and explained that he had not removed the building before April 1, as ordered, because he had not secured a purchaser. Upon his agreeing to put up for work, independent bond, he was given until July 1 to remove the building.

The city building inspector asked the council to condemn frame buildings at 1302-4 Cass street, 60-12 South Tenth street, Sixteenth and Harney streets and Seventeenth and Harney streets, the last two being fruit vendor's sheds.

The Southern Improvement club presented a communication recommending that the council make an effort to have the legislature change the city charter, whereby the city shall keep paying in repair after the property owners shall have paved the street twice. The communication was referred to the committee on paving and sewers.

Bids for insuring the four boilers in the city hall were received and referred to committee, the bids being much lower than those submitted heretofore. The city has been paying about $100 a year for insurance on the boilers, while the new bids are for $20 and $25 for insurance.

TALES ON MODERN AGRICULTURE

Prof. Davison of State University Lectures at the High School.

Gives the Student Some Idea of What Science Has Done to Make the Farm More Profitable and Attractive.

Prof. Davison of the State University School of Agriculture visited South Omaha Monday and gave an interesting lecture during the morning assembly period on the scope of the work attempted by modern scientific agriculture. The lecture is one of many which the professor expects to make before the high school assemblies of the state. He approached the students in a humorous vein, which appealed to the city youngsters. He had a way of making agriculture so readily understood and so attractive along with his fun that it has furnished food for many comments since the lecture was made. He gave a pointed description of the farmer boy of twenty-five years ago, who was routed out at 4 a. m. of a morning and sent to milk twenty cows, to harness his team, and feed his hogs, drive the cows to pasture, and then come to breakfast. After this he worked until sunset, and then milked until 10 o'clock at night, and yet, with all his work he was poor and did not know the reason for it. Of late years he has discovered that it was the blunders of his heavy toil which had kept him slaving against odds. Now, with far shorter hours of labor the rural community produces much greater wealth. It is due to scientific methods and careful adaptations. These elements of the science of agriculture have been studied and on them has been based the results of years of research, classified and placed in the hands of the student. This is what the University School of Agriculture has sought to accomplish. It has done so and the farming community evidently appreciates its assistance, judging from the vastly increased membership of the school at Lincoln. The professor emphasized the importance of the dairy and dairy farming. The handling of dairy cattle is a department all of its own at the school. Modern invention has come to the assistance and relieved the farmer from much of the heavy labor of this work. It is no longer necessary to spend two hours or more milking twenty cows; the modern milker accomplishes the work in one-fourth the former time and does it much better and more cleanly in every way.

The club is supported by the most prominent women of the city. The membership is large and increasing. The latest move is thought to be warranted by the strength and good feeling existing in the club at present.

Enna is an Italian and it is charged that he and some other men broke open a car of wheat and took out several sacks of the grain. The police have not filed any complaint, but it is likely that the charge of breaking and entering will be lodged against him. He had some companions whom the police are expecting to apprehend.

Monk Johnson was also the object of a vigorous search by the South Omaha officers. He is charged with attempting to pass a forged check on A. Wright at Twenty-sixth and N streets. The man is a negro. He had not been caught last night.
