When the Rosewater home was built at 1711 Douglas street, it was only slightly above the street, but as the large buildings were crected and the atreets cut down twice, the home was left standing more than twenty feet above the sidewalk level. Until the last week the home was ocupied by Mrs. Edward Rosewater. who will now make her home in the New Hamilton at Twenty-fourth and Farnam streets.

no less than 200 proposals. Wether Miss Sohn had ever received a proposal up to the time she published the announcement is not known. The brilliant and beautiful woman is not always proposed to as soon or as frequently as women who are not quite so brilliant and beautiful. The average man is timid in matters of this kind. And he is meek and modest. Some women appear to be so far beyond him in every respect that, while he would be grateful for a sign of to take the first step. Now, what does this show? What facts does it establish? First, it proves that the brilliant and beautiful woman whose very brilliancy and beauty often discouraged man, is, in reality, much sought after Seconly, that when a brilliant and beautiful woman finds that for some reason men think her haughty, or cold, or unwilling, she is justified in correcting such an erroneous impression-nay, it is her duty to correct it-at the earliest opportunity and by resorting to any legitimate means within her reach. Miss Sohn should have known that the moment she made her announcement she would be literally swamped with proposals. And she should have taken necessary case she could not be expected to fill all orders. That, she should have seen, was out of the question. Consequently she should have written her ad in an impersonal vein. She should have said something like this:

The sale of the shamrock and other Irish emblems in the streets is confined to a few days about St. Patrick's day, but preparations for this brief period of public sale, when novelties are introduced, are made months in advance. Emblems that will be offered in the streets here on March 17 may have been designed and the manufacture of them begun last September. New York dealers in these emblems and in the multitudious variety of novelties that are produced for all sorts of other occasions as well, sell goods all over the country and samples must be out early. Of St. Patrick's day emblems, for example, there are now offered about 100 varieties, and the manufacturers get out new styles every year. Dealers in distant localities, as, for instance, on the Pacific coast, must have these samples to relect from well in advance to enable them to give their orders in time, and it takes time to manufacture and transport the goods, which must arrive at their destinations in emple time for distribution. And the same is true of the little hatche's and badges, emblems of one sort and another that are specially designed for Washington's birthday, as it is also for the many kinds of emblems that are made for the various other days in the course of the year on which emblems are worn. They ready to give any assistance to interested are all designed and the work of manufac turing them is begun long in advance; and of all of these many emblems thus designed for wear on special days there are sold altogether in the United States about 2,000,000,000 yearly .- New York Sun.

Sewer Case Monday. The restraining order against the firm o Hannon & Craig, who have the contract for the construction of the N street guich sewer, will come up for trial Monday morning. This restraining order was secured by the South Omaha Realty company which is one of the holding companies formed by the South Omaha brewers since the Gibson law has forbidden breweries to own retail establishments. The realty company makes the contention that the construction of the sewer endangers the building at Twentieth and N streets. They want the contractors to insure them against loss, if the intersection should be wasned This the contractors refuse and in tend to force the issue in the courts. The intersection settled with the first spring rains and caused the breaking of a water main, which did considerable damage.

Records Show on Average of Pifty Years for Performance of Masterwork.

The wummum bonum" of a man's life -who shall say when or what it is in any given case? It becomes almost a work of supererogation to attempt to designate any single act or performance as the one most valuable in any man's career. Reduced to the ultimate, it becomes, after all, only the expression of an individual opinion, save in those striking instances in which by general consent a certain achievement is recognized as the man's greatest work. No one would deny that in "Paradise Lost" Milton attained the highest expression of his mentality, that Wellington achieved his greatest fame when he won the field of Waterloe, that Bacon's "Novum Organum" is his greatest accomplishment, and that "Don Quixote" exceeded anything else that Cervantes ever did. In other life-records one act may appear to another at different stages in the man's development; or to one observer the influence of one deed may far outweigh that of another, and contrariwise. This difficulty has been exceedingly hard to overcome, and without any attempt at dogmatism, but with the earnest desire to ascertain the truth as far as may be possible, has the decision been made in the disputable records.

Having been arranged in this manner, , the records give an average age of 50 for the perfomance of the masterwork. For the workers the average age is 47, and the thinkers 52. Chemists and physicists average the youngest at 41; dramatists and playwrights, poets and inventors, follow at 44; novelists give an average of 46; explorers and warriors, 47: musical composers and actors, 48; artists and divines pleasant taste makes it preferable to viooccupy the position of equilibrium at 50; essayists and reformers stand at $1; physicians and surgeons fine up with the statesmen at 52: philosophers give an average of 54; astronomers and mathematicians. satirists and humorists, reach 66; historians, 57, and naturalists and jurists. 58. As may be noted, there is a rearrangement of the order at this time, but the thinkers, as before, and as would naturally be expected, attain their full maturity at a later period than the workers.

The corollary is evident. Provided health and optimism remain, the man of 50 can command success as readily as the man of 30. Health plus optimism read the secret of success; the God-given, the other inborn, also, but capable of cultivation to the point of enthusiasm -W. A. N. Dorland in

Housewives Sell Old Furniture

The women who have learned to read "Want Ads" appreciate what these little ads do for the household. When you have an old style bookcase or a table that is now too small for your growing family, you can sell them through the Want Ads. Read these little Want ads every day---sooner or later you will find somebody who wants just the kind of a book case or table you no longer have any need for. The money you can get from the sale will help considerably in buying new articles for your home.

If you do not find an ad of somebody who wants what you have for sale, then write a small ad describing the articles which you want to sell and insert the ad in The Bee either Daily or Sunday -it will cost you only a few cents. It is almost certain that you will find somebody in this way who will make a bargain with you.
