SHIPPER'S READY TO FIGHT

WON TWICE, WILL TRY AGAIN

Wholesale Grocers are Determined to Resist That "Equalizing" Rate on Sugar Just Made Public.

"The 'equalization of rates to interior points' as proposed by the Transcontinental Freight association means nothing in plain words but an advance of 1/2 cent per pound to the consumers, and they should stand behind any association which opposes the increase in rates."

This is the translation of "equalized rates" made by Charles H. Pickens, general manager of Paxton & Gallagher, wholesale grocers, when asked just what the increase of 10 cents per 100 pounds on western sugar to Missouri river points meant.

"There is no getting around the proposition or explaining it away," said Mr. Pickens. "If the rates published in the new tariff of the Transcontinental Freight association become effective we are out of not only the western sugar, but also the Hawaiian sugar."

"When the advance is made in the freight rates from the west amounting to 10 cents per 100 pounds the rates will either be advanced from the south or the price of sugar will be advanced by the southern dealers. It will make no difference. Tack 10 cents extra on every bag of western sugar and the southern sugar will not sell for any less. It will be 10 cents advance on sugar, permanently, and nothing else."

Injunction is Essential.
Mr. Pickens did not care to discuss the injunction proceedings which the Missouri River Wholesale Grocers' association will start to prevent the transcontinental lines from putting the rates into effect July 10. But the general feeling among the wholesale grocers is that nothing else will do the business. The simple protest of consumers and dealers is considered empty air; sets of resolutions make nothing but a noise, but the injunction means action.

Three times within the last eighteen months the Missouri river shippers have been forced to "action." The first was the creamery cases, when the western trade proposed an advance on the cream rates. Then the Pacific coast lumber cases came up, when the western lines published a tariff which meant an advance on every foot of northern lumber shipped from Washington, Oregon and Idaho to the Missouri river. Now the wholesale grocers will ask the federal courts to enjoin the transcontinental lines to prevent the advance in sugar rates.

Just Simple Restraint.
The injunction simply ask that the roads be restrained from collecting the advanced charge until a hearing can be had before the Interstate Commerce commission and a ruling secured as to whether or not the new rates are fair and just and whether the old rate is giving the railroads a fair return for the service rendered.

The injunctions were readily granted to the creamery interests and also to the lumbermen. The wholesale grocers believe there is no doubt but what they have grounds for securing the injunction against the transcontinental lines.

"We're not asking," was the significant remark of one Omaha wholesale grocer when asked directly if the grocers would file the petition.

"The railroads are boosting rates at every possible point and for every reason. In the meantime, they have cut down their pay rolls and claim that one-fifth of the box cars in the United States are idle. It is simply up to the consumers and shippers to protect themselves, and the Missouri River wholesale grocers will not be found wanting."

BODY BLOW TO LOAN SHARKS

Big Employers of Labor Will Discharge Men Patronizing Them.

FORMAL WARNING IS ISSUED

President Smith of the M. E. Smith Company Says They Have Decided Not to Be Annoyed by It Further.

Salary loan sharks and installment furniture and clothing houses which charge exorbitant prices for household goods are gradually having their field of endeavor cut down, as the employers are taking a hand and making rules that will mean instant discharge for employees who deal with the houses that deal in assigned salaries.

M. E. Smith & Co., wholesale dry goods and operators of large clothing factories in Omaha, Nebraska City and Council Bluffs, have sent out the following letter to employees, which spells defeat for the body snatchers so far as employees of the dry goods house are concerned:

A number of employees have been assigning their unearned wages as security for loans or for purchases made from installment houses. This practice has grown until it has become a nuisance which cannot be longer tolerated. It has therefore been decided that any person who assigns his unearned salary without first obtaining the consent of some officer of the company will be immediately discharged.

"We believe this rule to be beneficial to employees as well as ourselves, as in almost every case where an unearned salary is assigned it is either assigned to secure a loan made at exorbitant rates of interest or for merchandise sold at exorbitant prices."

Action After Consideration.
Arthur Smith, president of the big wholesale house and factory, said:

"We have discussed the salary assignments and the constant annoyance of having loan agents and installment houses claim pay envelopes, and I presume that Mr. Burgess, who is out of the city at present, thought the letter the best way of giving notice to the employees."

"Personally I feel that the rule will prove beneficial. Most of the loans obtained and most of the merchandise bought on such terms, if not all, are entirely unnecessary. If occasion arises that makes it imperative for one of our employees to have money, we feel that there are ways of arranging these matters which will not subject the employee to the torment of the loan agent or bother us by having the wages claimed by attorneys and loan agents."

Inquiry disclosed the fact that other houses are contemplating similar action, as they have found that the loan agents at this time of the year are making special efforts to loan money to people in order that workers may "take vacations."

The employers feel that if it is necessary for employees to get into the clutches of loan sharks in order to take vacations the employees had better stay at work and take their recreation around Omaha after working hours.
