AMES DENIES THE CHARGE Massachusetts Congressman Says He

Had Nothing to Do With

Tickets.

LOWELL, Mass., June 8.-Congressman Butler Ames, who arrived at his home today from New York, gave out a statement tonight regarding the charge made before the republican committee at Chicago that he was respons ble for the use of alleged forged tickets of admission to the Florida state convention.

Congressman Ames declared that he had othing whatever to do with the tickets, either with receiving them or with their distribution, and that the statement credited to former United States District Attorney J. M. Stripling regarding the matter is "unqualifiedly not true."

The statement of Congressman Ames. said in part regarding the Florida conven-

The question arose as to how the delegates were to get into the convention and I think I remember saying that as they had collected the credentials, they would have to issue tickets, and no one without a ticket could get in. My suggestion was, that if tickets were ecessary to admission to the convention. hall, then those who were entitled to adhad arranged that no one without a ticket

"I did not get the tickets nor do I know who did. I heard afterward they were obtained at a printing office in St. Augustine. I left for the north before the convention. I was given to understand afterwards that at this convention the delegates were five or six to one in favor of Foraker.

"I was then and have been since then, opposed to instructions of any kind for delegates to the national convention, having at heart not a personal interest against Mr. Taft, but for the good of the party. This belief I share in common with some of the most prominent republican

In connection with the exhibit there will probably be an exhibit of the stock on the state college farm, including the horses purchased a year ago and which are to be used in developing a new breed of draft norses, the college working in harmony with the United States Department of Agriculture. The horses and stock will be kept n the stock barns on the grounds. The state board is now erecting and will have completed for occupation by the time the fair opens a fine new administration building. This stands just west of the old secretary's building. All the old office buildings which stood along the street just west of the stock pavillon and agricultural hall have been torn out. The open place back of them, which will be just south of the new administration buildng, is to be transformed into a plaza appropriately decorated with flowers and shrubs.

E. B. Cimilotta of Mason City will have at the state fair as one of the night attractions in the stock pavilion this year two herds of circus horses. One of the herds is all white in color and the other is cream colored, with white mane and tails. The horses are bred especially for trained circus horses. The entire herd is expected to make an attractive feature of the horse show attraction.

Fight for Speakership On. The fight for speaker of the next house of representatives of the Iowa general assembly is on. In fact, it was on in a gen eral way when the last general assembly adjourned. Since the primary election of Tuesday it has been given a new impetusfor the candidates for speaker now have before them the party nominees.

There is every indication that the complexion of the next general assembly of owa will not be materially different from what it was at the last session. The canlidates in the Calhoun and Jefferson disricts are progressives this year where they were standpatters before. This would give the progressives an increase of two in the republican caucus, but there are other ontingencies that are likely to cut this lown. For instance, in the Marlon county listrict a democrat is likely this year to the democrats do not stand any show of Ities by districts: making appreciable gains in either house Districts.
