GREAT TICKET AND PLATFORM

Taft and Sherman and Republican Policies Inevitable.

J. F. BOYD SAYS VICTORY IS SURE

Third District Congressman Returns from Convention and the East, Where "Bryan is Not Taken Seriously."

"The nomination of Mr. Sherman of New York as the running mate for Mr. Taft, is, I think, most fortunate," said Congressman J. F. Boyd at Hotel Rome. "I know Mr. Sherman quite well and think he is one of the ablest men in congress. There is no question that New York is solidly back of him, and he is the kind of a man who will rapidly grow in popular esteem. He is a fine speaker, one of the best in the country. I left the national convention Wednesday evening. I was in the hall when the Roosevelt demonstration was made. It was a magnificent tribute to Mr. Roosevelt's personality and that was the only cause of it. There is no question of the triumphant election of Mr. Taft. I was in New York shortly before coming to Chicago and find that the sentiment there is strongly in favor of Mr. Taft. They do not take Mr. Bryan's candidacy seriously. Though conceding his nomination, they do not believe he will run as well as he did at his second nomination."

GAS MEN EAGER FOR RETURNS

Delegates Cheer Nomination of Sherman for Vice President.

SENTIMENT FOR SMALL PLANT

Former President of the Iowa Association Believes Those in Little Towns are Best Payers.

The flame of interest in the Iowa District Gas Men's convention flickered between two breezes Friday morning—the nomination for the vice presidency and a new musical instrument which had been set up at the Hotel Rome. Delegates found it impossible to stay in their seats and continued to buzz about making inquiry over the telephone of newspaper officers about the nomination at Chicago.

"Sherman of New York," came the response, and there was a cheer in the grill room which drowned the music of the orchestra. Not until the new piece of machinery played "On Afloat to Go Home in the Dark" did the gas men become nervous and request that further texts of the new musical instrument be delayed until the adjournment of the meeting, which was being held in a convention room next to the grill room.

James Haines, ex-president of the Iowa district association, was named by the convention as the director from the association on the board of the American Gas Institute. It was also recommended that in the future all presidents of the Iowa association succeed to the position of director in the national organization.

The morning session was given over to a discussion of a number of technical subjects of interest to the gas manufacturers. One statement aroused considerable discussion and that was made by C. R. Tomoy of Newton, Ia., who said: "While my experience with large plants has been small, I believe it to be a fact that the small plant in the towns and cities of from 1,000 to 7,000 are better paying propositions than the large plants in cities the size of Des Moines and Omaha."

"Can Street Clear of Politics."
"In the first place the owners have a safer investment. They are not so liable to the aggravating controversies which the city plants must withstand. They do not need to go into politics in order to defend their rights and their business is less liable to attack by sensational newspapers."

Some of the gas men were of the opinion that the small plant was a losing proposition, but before the discussion ended the small manufacturer was given the impression by the association that he was the envy of the city managers and their stockholders.

During the morning session L. L. Kellogg, general manager of the Sioux City Gas and Electric company, was handed a telegram from his secretary, telling him of a workman not in the employ of the company, who had been electrocuted while clearing away cyclone wrecks by coming into contact with the wires of the Sioux City company. The telegram also told Mr. Kellogg that the workman had been warned that the wires were in the wrecked dwelling; that they were alive and the workmen must watch out for them. Regardless of the warning, the telegram stated, the workmen were careless and one of them was instantly killed.

The telegram received by Mr. Kellogg was an instance of the troubles of a gas and electric light manager, according to those who read the message.
In the afternoon the members of the association made a trip to the lane cut-off in McKean-Union Pacific motor cars, as guests of the Omaha Gas company. This trip closed the session of the fourth convention of the Iowa District Gas association, which has been meeting in Omaha three days, and next year goes to Waterloo, Ia., to meet at such dates as shall be chosen by the executive council of the association.

OMAHA FOR CORN AND OATS

Excelsa Kansas City in Receipts of These Grains for First Four Months.

For the four months ending April 30 the government report of commerce and industry shows that the receipts of corn and oats at the Omaha market were much larger than the receipts at Kansas City. The Kansas City receipts of wheat are larger than the receipts at Omaha, owing to the great amount of wheat produced in Kansas along lines of railroad terminating in Kansas City.
