comes to hospitality, you exceed them all—except Milwaukee.

In his address replying to Mayor Dahlman, Mr. Van Norman indicated that the Milwaukee delegation will be the first to extend an invitation to the National Live Stock Exchange, to meet in that city in 1909. He said, "I am going to extend an invitation later to these delegates, which will mean business."

The Milwaukee delegation consists of Mr. Van Norman and J. W. Holmes, but it has become apparent that they will have the assistance of many other delegates in securing the convention for next year. Denver delegates were on hand with badges, looking for that city.

Buffalo Man Speaks. B. Mullin of Buffalo also responded to the address of welcome as did also J. W. Moore of the Chicago Live Stock Exchange, who said the work of the national organization was increasing in importance year by year, and that the time had now come when it must do more than pass resolutions in regard to contemplated legislation and the live stock exchanges must prepare to open a campaign of active work until the representatives and senators in congress have an appreciation of the conditions and needs of the live stock interests.

After the adjournment at noon the delegates were entertained by the South Omaha exchange at lunch at the Exchange dining hall. The women ate at the Home, where the entertainment committee of the local exchange, and the committee for the entertainment of women had made ample preparations. A high hedge the palms and ferns was extended through the west side of the dining room and back of this were set the tables for the guests of honor. The rest of the hall was decorated as well. The luncheon was in courses and music was furnished by an orchestra.

Address of President.

The afternoon session was not called to order until 2 o'clock, which gave the executive committee an opportunity to hold a meeting and finish a report prepared. After the roll call and the seating of the delegates who presented proper credentials, President T. B. McPherson delivered his annual address which was as follows:

During the past year there has arisen no necessity for a meeting of your executive committee, matters of some importance have been handled by your officers, and of which you will be advised in his report, and your president has been asked to set in his official capacity, but once, and that was a hasty call to Washington to appear as your representative before a congressional committee in the interest of a bill now pending there, designed to secure better and more efficient supply of railroads in the matter of supplying cars for live stock shippers and shortening the time required to deliver such shipments to their destined markets.

To this call he responded, meeting a delegation from Chicago consisting of your secretary, Mr. Baker, Mr. John W. Moore, Mr. Van Norman and Mr. Van Norman, also the Milwaukee delegation, which has been invited to meet in that city in 1909. He said, "I am going to extend an invitation later to these delegates, which will mean business."

Record of the Year.

Such a very brief record of the year, and since this report has not been completed in the time allotted by your program, going to suggest a "blurb" which would be in the nature of a preliminary report on the work of the live stock exchange, which has been brought to my mind by the purpose of the live stock exchange, which is to protect the interests of the live stock industry in all its branches, and the protection of the industry from the unjust and unfair practices of becoming law at the next session of congress.

There seems to be a sort of mystery about the minds of the public, and mystery always breeds distrust. The American people are the father of such mystical parasites as co-operative commission houses. I have unlimited faith in the fair-mindedness and good judgment of the American people, and I believe when they know the truth about us and all of it, that they will give us the credit that is our due. We were so beloved among the great commercial organizations of the world, for you know and I know, that we are the cleanest and most unselfish of them all. Looking to the future, then, I say, unfurl your banners, ask the people into your confidence, and with the sanction of public opinion behind you, march on to an assured victory and the greater good that we have ever dreamed of by the wise old heads that framed your constitution and made your existence possible.

AFTERNOON SESSION INTERESTING Several Papers Read Call Up Lively Discussion

Following the delivery of Edgar E. Overstreet's address, George V. Wells of Chicago declared his objection to the general attack on the legislation which is intended, he said, to control and keep in check the monopolistic tendencies of the times. He wished to support the present administration in all its efforts in that direction. From this premise, however, he took the ground of favoring also the removal of all trusts which foster a partial monopoly. "High prices do not help any business in the long run," he said. "They should be kept as nearly as possible at the level where they would stand without the artificial effect of tariff laws."

In defense of Mr. Overstreet, J. C. Swift of Kansas City repeated what Mr. Overstreet has emphasized several times in his address, that no objection was made to federal regulation of business affairs of large proportion, but that it was a question of state, county and municipal interference which was wrong.

Uniformity of Rules. Frank E. Scott of Sioux City, spoke on "Uniformity of Rules." Mr. Scott began his work in the commission business in South Omaha several years ago. He is now secretary of the Sioux City exchange. He said in part:

"The sessions of our exchange and the deliberations of this body has shown one source of needless expense and pointed out its remedy. I refer to the causes which give rise to the solicitor rate. The rate, you know, is aimed to make a uniform regulation governing the number of men sent into the live stock territory to secure trade and their time of service. It was long ago discovered that the employment of numerous solicitors was ruinous to the interests of the business, and in reality the present rule requires that only one solicitor be allowed on the road at any one time, that he shall register 'out' and 'in' with the proper exchange authority and that he shall not be engaged in soliciting more than fifteen days in any one month."

"The fact has been discovered and I do not wish to offer this as a criticism, that in the various exchanges different interpretations have been made of the provisions of this rule. Sioux City has with the rest been at fault and we are willing to bear our share of the criticism. The point is that in registering out time has been allowed for railway travel, and the date of arrival in any territory has been placed a side date at which the solicitor begins his job. Then he is allowed to solicit a solicitor to spend fifteen days in a month with the additional time he has spent in traveling. This often represents early as much time as the actual solicitation."

South Omaha Complex. "In South Omaha I am informed the literal interpretation of the rule is strictly adhered to and from the actual date a solicitor leaves South Omaha dates his time on the road."

The speaker here cited several other exchanges which had placed different interpretations of the meaning of the rule. This was especially noted of Chicago.

"The point I wish to make is not one of criticism, but if we have rules governing our actions in this particular, let the executive committee of the exchange, which interprets the rule in such unambiguous terms that there shall be no mistaking the requirement of the rules in any exchange. It is the only way that the anxiety of certain exchanges may be effectively allayed and the practice of encroachment may be stopped."

J. W. Moore of Chicago objected to the implication that Chicago had evaded the spirit of the rule and called on the secretary of the Chicago exchange, C. W. Baker, to explain the exact conditions. Other exchanges also objected to the classification which placed them in the same category as the Chicago exchange. In the course of the discussion, however, it developed that some such condition as the speaker had described did exist. He again reiterated his statement that his paper should not be taken as criticism, but as a plea for a uniform interpretation of the exchange.

The whole question was referred to the executive committee for consideration and recommendation.

A. J. Campion of Denver requested that his paper on "Commissions From a Denver Standpoint" be placed on the agenda of the executive committee, had incorporated in the issue he had intended to make in its report and he wished to defer his argument until the question was thus brought before the convention.

All Aboard for Manawa. The convention therefore adjourned promptly on time and took the cars for Omaha, where at 5 o'clock the delegates and their wives were provided with special cars to Lake Manawa. They were entertained at dinner by the Council Bluffs Boatmen's association. This dinner was one of the most brilliant affairs conducted at that club. All conditions of weather and arrangements were perfect. After the dinner the club enjoyed an informal dance in the pavilion.

The special features of the day's session in South Omaha will be first a called meeting of the executive committee at the Exchange hall at 8 o'clock.

Today's Program. The program for the day is as follows: Call to order at 10 o'clock a. m. at the hall of the South Omaha Live Stock Exchange. Address, ex-President J. C. Swift of Kansas City. Discussion. Live Stock Exchanges: Their Reasons for Their Existence; Their Limitations. George V. Wells of Chicago. Discussion. "Pointers." J. Lavery of Omaha. Discussion. The Live Stock Commission Man and His Place in the Business World. C. W. Watkins of Buffalo. Discussion. Adjournment until 2 p. m. Lunch at the Exchange restaurant. AFTERNOON SESSION. Convention convenes at 2 o'clock. Business Session. Determination of the next place of meeting. Election of officers for the ensuing year. Adjournment sine die. Dinner tendered by the South Omaha Live Stock exchange to the delegates and their wives at the Field club.

Women at Country Club. The women of the convention will have luncheon at the Country Club. This is an assured treat, for the members of the entertainment committee of the South Omaha exchange are also members of the Country club and will take exceptional pride in this function.

Milwaukee or Denver. It has been suggested that the contest for the next place of meeting for 1909 will be between Milwaukee and Denver. Both are in the field. The Milwaukee speaker, G. E. Van Norman, made a bid for the honor in replying to Mayor J. C. Dahlman's address of welcome at the morning session. The Denver delegation is working hard and the result of their efforts is shown by the appearance of many small blue badges emblazoned by president that the president shall be elected from the exchange which has the honor of entertainment.

LIVE STOCK MEN WELL CARED FOR Remarkable Gastronomic Showing Made by South Omaha.

The smack of the luncheon served to the delegates to the National Live Stock association in South Omaha will linger on the palates of our grandsons, was the unique way in which Frank E. Scott, manager of the Clay-Robinson company's Sioux City office, complimented the Union Stock Yards company and South Omaha Live Stock exchange for the refreshments served at the exchange restaurant Thursday.

As a matter of fact the delegates will probably leave Omaha and South Omaha remembering nothing better than the luncheon which are served. They are easily the hit of the meeting so far as entertainment is concerned.

Nor will the South Omaha Live Stock exchange stop with the noonday luncheon. The dinner at Manawa last evening and the dinner yet to be given this evening at the Field club will be remembered along with the luncheons at the exchange restaurant, which are delightfully informal.

Nor will the delegates are attending a convention and the meeting adjourns they go where they please for meals, some of them to crowded hotels, others to hot restaurants—but they all have to look out for themselves.

But meetings at the hall of the South Omaha Live Stock exchange the delegates go down stairs to a banquet room where everything is warm and served promptly by an army of special colored waiters who are charged to be quick if nothing else.

This is the menu served Thursday from 12:30 to 2 o'clock. Mint Julep. Consomme in Cups. Cheese Straws. Lake Crappies, maitre d'hotel. Broiled Chicken. Cucumbers. Saratoga Chips. New Potatoes in Cream. Jus Peas Cased. Frenzied Pudding. Waldorf Salad. Neuchatel Cream. Flakes. Coffee. Cigars.

But to show the visitors that they can do it again another menu has been issued for Friday, which presents a gastronomic array hard to equal. This is what the South Omaha live stock dealers will serve their guests:

Cold Bouillion. Olives. Soft Shell Crabs en Canape. Cucumbers. Flakes. Tenderloin of Beef, Financiere. Mashed Potatoes. Asparagus. Claret Punch. Combination Salad. Cantaloupe a la Mode. Coffee. Cigars.

All this is listed on dainty menu cards, the design being a special one of "Our Jim" in the center of a double page holding his rita in one hand while at the opposite end a fat porker dangles by the hind leg. In the other hand "Our Jim" has a larriat and firmly fast in the loop end of the buckskin rope is a "one year old yearling" calf. The ropes stretch across the pages of the menu cards and compose its decorations.

The official bulletin of the twentieth annual meeting in blue and white enamel and gold plate. It is small, and neat in the shape of a double shield, and having only the following inscription: "South Omaha, June, 1908. N. L. S. E."

While the luncheons and entertainments at the exchange restaurant are said to be given by the South Omaha exchange, officials of the exchange have not been backward in saying "that in reality they are given with the compliments of the Union Stock Yards company of South Omaha and the guests and South Omaha business men." The speaker here cited several other exchanges which had placed different interpretations of the meaning of the rule. This was especially noted of Chicago.

"The point I wish to make is not one of criticism, but if we have rules governing our actions in this particular, let the executive committee of the exchange, which interprets the rule in such unambiguous terms that there shall be no mistaking the requirement of the rules in any exchange. NO POMP, NO EULOGY

(Continued on Second Page.) is fixed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, in order to give some of those whose presence is desired time to get here from distant points. All of these persons have been telegraphed for and until responses are received no names or details of the funeral will be announced. A tentative list of the honorary pall bearers has been prepared and it is expected the names will be made public as soon as those invited to act have been heard from.

Although the funeral will be strictly private at Mrs. Cleveland's residence, a great many people are expected to come to Princeton tomorrow and in anticipation of this the local authorities are making preparations to handle the crowd. A force of policemen from Trenton, N. J., will be present to assist the local police and an attempt will be made to rope off the streets from the Cleveland residence at Bayard Lane and Hodgson avenue to the cemetery. Local militiamen may also be pressed into service.

Among Mrs. Cleveland's callers during the morning hours were General A. T. Ormond and Dr. Cyrus F. Brackett, both of Princeton university and intimate friends of the family.

More than 1,000 telegrams have been received at the Cleveland home and many more are still coming. Among those given out today were these: From Baron Takahira, the Japanese ambassador at Washington: Greatly shocked by and intelligence. I hasten to tender very deep condolence and sincere sympathy for the great bereavement that has befallen you and the country. Message from Mr. Bryan: From William J. Bryan: Mrs. Cleveland, I hasten to me in sending sympathy and condolence. From Booker T. Washington: Please accept deepest sympathy of my heart and myself. Mr. Cleveland was one of our best friends. The governor of Mississippi: Our people extend to you heartfelt sympathy. Cardinal Gibbons: Accept my sincere condolence in your great bereavement by the death of my honored friend. Governor of Wisconsin: Wisconsin shares with you the great affliction which has come to your home. The passing of Grover Cleveland is a great loss to the country he served with fidelity and honor. Prince Roland Bonaparte, Paris: I beg leave to express to you my most respectful condolence for the misfortune which has befallen you. Princeton club of St. Louis: The university has lost by his death one of its most respected and beloved trustees. Messages of sympathy were also received from A. W. Terrill, former minister to Turkey; C. R. Breckenridge, former minister to Russia; Governor Stuart of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Mary Lloyd Harrison, widow of President Harrison; and Allen Marquard of Frankfurt, Germany.

Governors Ask to Attend. Governor Hughes of New York, Governor Fort of New Jersey and Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia have wired Mrs. Cleveland asking permission to attend the funeral.

Governor Smith stated that he had been a member of President Cleveland's cabinet and desired to pay in person his respects to his dead friend. Mrs. Cleveland replied to the three governors that she would be glad to have them present.

While no list of pall-bearers has been given out, it is said that the following persons have been asked to serve: Paul Morton; Commodore E. C. Benedict; Dr. Henry Van Dyke; Prof. John G. Hibbins; Prof. Andrew F. West and Dr. John F. Finley.

It is understood that the Rev. Dr. Richards of New York, a Presbyterian minister, and friend of the family, has been invited to conduct the services tomorrow. If he is unable to come to Princeton, one of the local Presbyterian ministers is likely to have charge of the services.

According to present arrangements, President Roosevelt will arrive about 4 p. m. tomorrow and will return to Oyster Bay immediately after the funeral.

Little Girl Fries Suicide. IOWA CITY, June 25.—Special.—Taking his refusal to hunt the eggs with her as a jilt, little 14-year-old Julia Green of Cedar Rapids, attempted suicide by taking a large dose of strychnine, at the home of her aunt near Morse, Ia., where she was visiting. It was early evening when the quarrel occurred between the little folks, between whom a very strong friendship had been formed during the few days of her visit on the farm. The little girl completed her egg-bunt alone and then went to her room. On the way she opened a medicine chest and took out a large bottle of the poison, which she took to her room. She swallowed the contents of the bottle, but the amount proved to be an overdose, and consequently acted as an antidote for a time. The little girl was recovering, between sobs and groans the motive of her suicidal attempt was learned.
