to have been overtaxed.

In the communication accompanying the claim, or, more properly speaking, collection of claims, Hardin recites that in 1908 and 1904 the State Board of Review directed | Song the county auditor to reduce the assessment on all lands within the county, inneluding lands in incorporated cities and Address inneluding lands in incorporated cities and towns not divided into lots of ten acres or less, 10 per cent. The list of claims flied by Hardin, aggre gate about $1,500. The largest refunds sought are for the taxes paid by the East Omaha Land company, E. W. Nash, J. A. Creighton, Leonard Everett, who owned considerable land within the city limits of Council Bluffs which is held "for agricultural purposes only." In all there are forty-two claims, ranging from a few dollars to $200.

The whole matter was referred by the board to County Attorney Hess, and it is likely that the courts will be appealed to before the supervisors consent to giving up any of the county's cash to City Assessor Hardin.

Some months ago it was stated that Hardin was securing assignments from heavy taxpayers throughout Pottawattamie county of claims against the county for some tax said to have been illegally or wrongfully assessed but at the time Hardin declined to give out any information, it now develops that Hardin was under the impression that the 10 per cent reduction ordered by the State Board of Review had not been made anywhere in the county but subsequent investigation by him disclosed the fact that only lands within the limits of the city of Council Bluffs had not been given the benefit of the reduction. County Auditor Cheyne, while not giving the list presented by Hardin for examination expressed the belief that a number of 10-acre plots were included in the lot and that these did not come under the order issued by the State Board of Review. And I venture no uncertain statement when I say that throughout Iowa there is a satisfaction and rejoicing, that from the first reading of the national platform to those who so desired it, and the second reading or the third at the utmost to those who wished it otherwise, it is clear that the maintenance of the protective idea is still the cornerstone of republicanism; that from the platform of our party rings out the grand old battle cry of protection with all its old-fashioned simplicity, strength and significance; without one word of qualification to limit or mystify its meaning or one accent of apology for its uttsrance, Republican Congress to Act.

Republican Congress to Act. By a republican congress the Dingley schedules will be scrutinized with the presumption arising from ten years of the high tide of progress and prosperity in their favor, and upon every article where the full measure of necessary protection to insure to the American laborer the highest wages in the world and to the American farmer the best market in the world does not require the present rate of duty, it will be lowered to that extent regardless of what protest may come from any special interest; and in the same spirit and with the same promptitude if it should appear that the present schedule does not, By a republican congress the Dingley chedules will be scrutinized with the preappear that the present schedule does not, and with the same promptitude if it should appear that the present schedule does not, in any single instance, give to our citizen a distinct advantage over the citizen of every other nation, the duty upon that article must be raised accordingly.

The Iowa idea of a protective tariff is the nation-wide doctrine of the republican party, that there must be all the protection required to give to home industry the exclusive American field, so far as it can occupy the same, at a clear profit, after paying wages commensurate with the American idea of sufficient earnings to maintain a comfortable home owned by the wage earner himself, with something laid by for the rainy day of sickness and misfortune, and when the duty goes beyond such limitations, and only then, it should be stricken off without question as a burden for which there is no rightful beneficiary.

The man who proclaims either dissension in or desertion from the ranks of Iowa republicanism, either dreams in the lethargy of insensibility, or slanders the intelligence of a state that in 1882 railled from the defeat twelve months before and repudiated free trade by a majority of 25,000, and in 1893 again repudiated free trade and reaffirmed its everlasting faith in sound money by more than 65,000 majority.

The trouble of our day is we have in our political campaigns too much rainbow chasing and rainbow painting of miraculous futures upon skies of impossibility, and too little consideration and review of past achievements as an indication of future performances.
