CAPTAIN JACK AT BENSON

Post-Scout Entertains Large Crowd with Witty Sayings.

TELLS HOW HE GOT STARTED

Paid, $500 to Get First Poems Published and Then Gave Entire Edition Away for Want of Buyers.

Captain Jack Crawford, "the post-scout of the Elvans" kept a large crowd in continued laughter and merriment yesterday afternoon he made his first appearance at the Benson chalet. "Captain Jack" appears in scouting costume, buckskin trousers and sombrero and his long grey hair and grey mustache and goatee make him look much like Buffalo Bill.

He has been much fighting from the days when he fought as a boy by the side of his father through his long list of Indian skirmishes and battles. In the early '70s he was the Black Hills correspondent for The Bee, and he is happy to remember that leading men said his letters in The Bee did more than any other one thing in bringing settlers to that country.

Captain Jack breathes the healthy western spirit and he has command of a fine sense of humor in describing many incidents of his first visits to New York and of happenings out in the mountains and on the plains when the Indians were still the white man's sworn foes.

"I will recite some of my poems. My principal reason for doing this is because no one else recites them. Once when I was out on the plains one of my pals said to me, 'Why don't you publish your poems? The people of the east are hungry for them.' Well, a frontiersman will never let anyone go hungry as long as he can give him some grub. So I said I'd feed the hungry people of the east. I wrote to a publisher and sent him some samples and I got an answer. The publisher's letter said that he noticed a great similarity between my work and that of Robert Burns and Joaquin Miller and Bretz Harte, but he said I would have to put up $500 to have the volume printed. That 'but' was what stumped me. But one day my pal handed me a check for $500 and told me to have the poems published. I sent the money to the publisher and the book came out. But the people weren't hungry any more. But I got even with them. I made them eat. For I gave away 700 copies free."

STRAY SHOT MAY BE FATAL

Accidental Discharge of Small Pistol Likely to Cause Death of Young Man.

While some young men were examining a cheap B. B. caliber one-barreled revolver just south of William street on Thirteenth street shortly before 9 o'clock Thursday night the revolver was accidentally discharged, the bullet entering the forehead of James Alexis, an employe of the Kreuz brewery who lives at 93 South Twelfth street. At the time of the shooting the revolver was in the hands of 15-year-old Charles Chevik, 1225 South Fourteenth street. The bullet entered the forehead of Alexis immediately above the nose. He was removed to the St. Joseph hospital and attended by Drs. Hamilton and Rimaneck. He is still alive, although small hopes are held out for his recovery.

CLEVELAND AT REST

Goodyear, General Anson McCook, St. Clair McKelway and Mr. Farquhar, Secretary of the Board of Trustees of Princeton University, Elizabeth Bishop McFall of Trenton, Father Leahy of Princeton, Nineteenth, representatives of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, Twentieth, Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hamlin, Boston, Twenty-first, Mrs. J. Morgan, Miss Sarah Morgan, Mrs. George B. McCallan, Henry Satterlee, Twenty-second, Mrs. A. N. Russell, Mrs. Howard, and Albert O. Hayden, Twenty-third, Mr. and Mrs. George Armour, Princeton; Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, New York; Mrs. E. Henry Philadelphia, Twenty-fourth, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Colgate, New York; Charles R. Crane, Redman; George W. Balfour, Fifth, T. S. Bissell, E. R. Bacon and H. H. Topkay, Twenty-sixth, Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett and Mrs. Horatio Garrett, Baltimore.

Many Came to Princeton.

There were comparatively few arrivals of those invited to attend the funeral up to noon. The town began to take on a more animated appearance about that hour, when hundreds of persons from near-by places began arriving early to see the funeral procession and get a glimpse of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Outside the Cleveland home, which stands in one of the prettiest parts of Princeton, there were no signs during the morning of what took place this afternoon. The house stands far from the most frequented streets and few persons were in the vicinity. At the entrance to the Cleveland grounds a policeman stood guard and only those known to him or vouched for by those in charge were permitted to enter the grounds.

Among those who applied for admission was an elderly man who asked to be permitted to view the body of the former president. He proved to be "Tony" Loggnet of Trenton, N. J. Another wreath made from the ivy of the class of '88 on Nassau was among those placed near the casket.

Richard, the elder son, upon returning from a walk with Miss Rose Cleveland, volunteered to assist those in charge of the arrangements by running errands about the house. Esther, the other child here, kept to her room and was not to be seen.

The Cleveland team, a handsome pair of dapple grays attached to the family survey, was kept busy during the morning making trips to and from Westland.

Fakirs were about the streets early offering pictures of Mr. Cleveland and badges of mourning for sale as souvenirs.

Mrs. Cleveland in Seclusion.
Mrs. Cleveland remained in seclusion during the day and no one but the most intimate friends were permitted to see her. She is doing well and is bearing up bravely under the strain. She remained in her room on the second floor of the house, next to the room in which the body of her husband lies, but occasionally she went into the latter room. Esther was constantly with her during the greater part of the day. Wagon loads of flowers reached the house as the day advanced. A floral piece from Baron Rio Branco was filed with green and yellow ribbons six inches wide, on which was inscribed, "Homage of Baron Rio Branco on behalf of Brazil."

Message from Baron Kaneko.

Among the messages of sympathy received today was one from Viscount Kaneko of Japan. Mark Twain sent this message to Mrs. Cleveland:

"He was a man I knew, loved and honored for twenty-five years. I mourn with you from Beverly, Mass., signed Nabuco, came the following:
Brazilian ambassador presents deep condolence of Brazilian nation, President Oyster Bay, N. Y. He will travel to Princeton by a special train to attend the funeral of Mr. Cleveland.

The president's special will leave Oyster Bay at 1:30 p. m., arriving at Long Island City at 2:30 p. m. Transferring to Jersey City by boat the party will leave that place at 3:45, arriving at Princeton an hour later. Returning the president will leave Princeton about 5:30 p. m. and reach Oyster Bay at 8:30 p. m.

Beginning at daybreak salutes were fired by all ships and army posts, beginning at military posts with a thunder of thirteen guns and winding up with forty-five guns at sunset. Throughout the world tribute in some form, either under American or foreign auspices, was rendered.

READ WHAT 3 GREAT PAPERS SAY ABOUT 3 GREAT NOVELS

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE
"The Silver Blade," without being cheaply sensational, is about the most compelling detective story of recent years. And, despite the fact that the figure of such stories is more or less prescribed, this one has an individuality of its own."

THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW
"Randall Parrish's former stories proved him to be of the stuff of which good novelists are made; but 'Prisoners of Chance' is in every respect a notable advance upon his previous work. 'Prisoners of Chance' is like a breath from the wilderness blowing down a city street."

THE BOSTON HERALD
"Into the Primitive" carries the reader along a course of human development where the struggle for bare existence brings to the surface animating motives in three souls. This is one of the most exciting adventure stories of the year."
