ONE PLACE NATURE OWNS

Hiram, O., Defies the Nagging Whip of Progress.

SAME AS IT WAS BEFORE WAR

Dexter L. Thomas, Who Attends Reunion of His College Friends, Finds No Change in the Old Place.

Dexter L. Thomas has returned from attending the "home coming" of students at Hiram college, Hiram, O., where he was a student in 1881, in 1889 and in 1904.

Time seems to have stood still for sixty years, so near great cities and close to the center of population of the country, Hiram still blossoms in its primeval beauty and still wears its rustic homespun in the midst of a state where its sister towns and cities are wearing the latest styles.

"Going down from Cleveland on the interurban, thirty-five miles to Hiram, one drops back at least half a century," said Mr. Thomas. "The village where the college is located has only a few hundred people and the nearest railroad is two miles away. The town is just about as it was when I was a boy of 16 years, in 1881. Of course, there is no saloon. Most of the men don't smoke, while they look upon a drinking man with extreme aversion."

"Hiram college was originally the Western Reserve Eclectic Institute, James A. Garfield attended it while a boy of 16 years. At that time a Campbellite preacher and gave little promise of the great honor which was to be his later when he was to become president of the United States. His widow was among those present at the home coming. The brother of Mrs. Garfield, Joseph H. Garfield, was also there. Mrs. Nellie Rockwell, was also there. I used to go to school with Joe and we had a fine time 'reminiscing'."

Recalled A. Sutton Hayden. "Of course, there was much talking over the old days. We recalled such figures as A. Sutton Hayden, who was the first principal of the school, and was the author of the 'Sacred Melodion', a book of songs written with notes which were distinguished one from the other. Instead of being all-round 'do', was square 'ra', was triangular, etc. They were known as 'patent notes' though vulgarly known as 'buckheat notes'."

"Another incident I recalled, particularly as I'm a Nebraskan, was the affair between Miss Laura A. Clark and Prof. Wilbur. Miss Clark was the primary teacher under whom I received my first instruction. She was a very handsome woman and Prof. Wilbur fell desperately in love with her. She refused him and he was so dependent over his unhappiness that his life hung in the balance. Later he came to Nebraska in pioneer days and the town of Wilbur was named after him."

Tillie Newcomb, who was a music teacher in the school forty-three years ago, is now Mrs. Tillie Newcomb Ellis and lives in a pretty house in the village, where a fountain spouts in the front yard and it is said to have spouted thus for nearly forty years, with no more change than the town itself.

Hiram Chamberlain, who used to be a teacher in the college, attended the home coming. He is now high in the iron industry in Chattanooga, Tenn.

John C. Cowin of Omaha was a student of the college in 1881 and it was only a year or two since he had been in business when attending the home coming. Judge W. W. Slabaugh is a graduate of the school. George M. Southmayd is another Omahian who is an alumnus. He attended the reunion.

Summer's sun is trying to every complexion, for the softer and more delicate the skin, the more difficult it is to keep it from becoming rough, burned or tanned during the hot season.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Henry Hinkel Drowns in Effort to Rescue Companion Who Escapes.

BURGLARS PUT IN BUSY NIGHT

Police Believe They Are Weaving a Strong Web Around Charles Payne, Who When Arrested Was Suffering from Bullet Wound.

Henry Hinkel, a young man who lived near Twenty-first and W streets, was drowned yesterday in a bayou of the Missouri near the grease factory in South Omaha. The death occurred during the latter part of the afternoon. He and a large crowd of young fellows went to the river. A number of them went swimming in a place they supposed safe. It appears from the story of the father that one of the other men got into a dangerous place and being frightened began to shout for help. Hinkel went to his aid and was himself caught by the current. The first man recovered his composure and reached a place of safety but when he turned to look for Hinkel he had disappeared entirely. The water was moving rapidly toward the main current of the river and it is believed that the unfortunate man was carried into the swollen stream. If so, the body will not be found for weeks in all probability and possible never.

Hinkel was only 24 years old. He has two brothers. The men who were with him were members of a sheep killing gang in the local packing houses where Hinkel also worked. The police will warn the down stream points to watch for the floater. Hinkel was noted as a ball player, being catcher for the Stringers of the Inter city league.

Three Places Robbed. Notwithstanding the capture of Charles Payne, supposed to be one of the burglars responsible for much of the work done in the city, three places of business were entered Thursday night, showing that the element was not all cornered in the capture of one prisoner. The places are John Rich's saloon, 341 N street, A. J. King, 321 N and the grocery of Lipton & Eggers, 15 South Twenty-fourth. At A. J. King's place they secured a quantity of whiskey and cigars and in the other place similar booty. J. C. Trouton, police captain, encountered them late in the night trying to break into Harry Lupton's pawn shop at 243 N street. They had not yet succeeded. His fired several shots at them as they ran but failed to stop any of them. Yesterday a gang of men was picked up in a box car on the tracks. They had plenty of liquor with them and they were suspected of being implicated. The evidence has not yet been worked up connecting them positively with the cause, but it is believed by the police that the link will be found.

Charges Against Payne. The police think they have secured evidence enough to make a good case against Charles Payne. They expect to make a complaint against him on five or six different charges of house breaking. The best of the cases is that of Henry J. Schrader, 1029 North Twentieth. This robbery was committed January 7, 1908. The house was lighted at the time, for the children were sick. The burglar entered and was seen by Mr. Schrader in the act of robbing after the latter's grocer had the garment and ran out the door. There he ran into Mrs. Schrader. The children also saw him. All of them were brought to see Payne. All said he was the man. The light was such as to make the identification easy. They also had a cap which fitted Payne perfectly and which he had dropped as he ran out. He secured a few dollars in change from the pants. Mr. Schrader gave chase until he was distanced. Several arrests were made at the time, but none were found right in this case, however, the family is positive. The description given by Mr. Schrader at the time tallies in all points with the description of Payne.

Magie City Goals. The repairs to the city jail are advancing rapidly. Found—Stray cow; calf born since found. Havelok, is and B. Miss Kathryn Lowery is visiting friends at Manila, Ia.

Edward R. Beardsley, 1102 North Twenty-seventh street, reported the birth of a daughter yesterday.

The appraisers of damages on Thirty-sixth street, south of Q, have discovered the cause of the damage.

Miss Harriet Smith and Miss Edith Carpenter gave a kitchen shower yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Mabel Cheek.

being held was blown down, and badly torn. No one was injured as the people had plenty of time to leave the tent and move to the town hall. Rev. B. S. Kistler, president of the chautauqua, said that the tent would be up in time for the exercises this afternoon, with no further damage than perhaps a rent or two, which will have to be repaired later.

The storm continued its course to Krug park and threatened the destruction of that resort for a short time. When the storm had cleared away, however, it was found that the principal damage was the destruction of some trees and the burning of one of the new concessions which was just opened for business Saturday. This burned to the ground. The lights were put out of commission for the night, but Manager Cole said that all damage would be repaired before noon today.

Lightning struck the barn of Hugh McCaffrey on the West Dodge-street road, and burned it to the ground. Three horses were burned. The barn contained twenty-seven tons of hay, which was also burned, making a blaze which could be seen for miles.

Fremont Chautauqua Opens. FREMONT, Neb., June 27.—(Special.)—The opening session of the Fremont Chautauqua was held this evening at the city park. The program consisted of music by the Hungarian orchestra, under the leadership of Prof. Schlickdriest, and a lecture by Robert P. Miles. The tent was crowded, all seats being taken and a great many people standing. A large number of season tickets have been sold and big crowds are expected. Ex-Governor Richard Yates is on the program for tomorrow.

Fight for Seat in Hastings Council. HASTINGS, Neb., June 27.—(Special Telegram.)—The Chouteau-Van Patten second ward election contest came up before Judge Dungan again today and was set for trial tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. The contest's appeal was dismissed yesterday because the transcript was not properly certified.

Mr. Van Patten's attorneys filed a new transcript this morning and renewed their request for an immediate hearing. The day was given to arguments on objections offered by contestant, all of which were overruled. The absence of prohibition members of the council at an adjourned meeting this morning prevented action on the application for liquor license, and a recess was taken to Monday evening, July 6. If the prohibition members persist in remaining away from sessions an effort may be made to compel their attendance by legal process.

THE MUCH SLANDERED LEMON

Numerous Necessary and Practical Ways in Which It is Used.

On a hot summer evening, when the thermometer creeps upward, nothing is more refreshing than the delicate juice squeezed in water and sipped slowly.

When the head is aching and fever is high a hot lemonade brings almost instant relief. In tropical climates lemons are used for fevers and the fruit is rubbed on the forehead to drive away the pain of congestion.

When the sun kisses your cheek too fervently, leaving little pink dots on the pink and white complexion, a good lemon is your best friend. Rub it on generously, or paint the juice on each little stain and let it remain there over night. Repeat the operation night and morning for a few days, afterward applying cream and using massage and the freckles all disappear.

The value of this most common fruit is seldom reckoned. When the ancient mariners found their sailors dying of the scurvy the ship would be headed to the first land sighted and the poor men would live on the lemons for a time, when their blood was instantly purified of the poison the scurvy miasma had infused into it.

After the shampoo the juice of the lemon gives fresh vigor to the roots and seems to act as a cleanser and stimulant to the scalp.

For the calloused aching feet, nothing will soften them more readily than this poor despised fruit. Cut the lemons in half and rub it on your feet after bathing them in warm water and they will become soft in no time and feel cool and refreshed.

In nausea lemon juice is a wonderful antidote. We do not have to depend upon nurses or physicians for this remedy. Where stains are concerned, nothing is more helpful than the lemon. For ink stains when everything fails the juice of the lemon will quickly remove the unsightly mark. Brass is cleaned of the green mouldy appearance by the use of lemon. Salt and lemon for straw hats or for rust marks has never been substituted with anything half so good.

There is a certain acid of great value in this commonly used and much abused fruit. They may frequently be obtained for 6 cents a dozen, and seldom cost more than 15 cents a dozen, therefore, it is within the reach of almost every family. Lemon sherbet, lemon cream cakes or
