RALDWIN IS SURE OF SUCCESS Army Officers Are Auxiously Awaiting Test of Dirigible Balloon at Fort Meyer on Monday.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.-Bix thousand per ple who gathered at Brighton Beach race track this afternoon to witness the first public flight of Henri Farman's heavierthan-air flying machine were disappointed, as a high wind prevented the flight.

"It would be suicide to attempt to fly with a gale such as this blowing," said Mr. Farman, who appeared to be more disappointed than anyone else.

At 4 o'clock when a forty-mile-an-hour wind precluded the possibility of an ascension, Mr. Farman announced he would try again on Monday. However, he wheeled his machine out of the shed for inspection by the crowds.

Among the visitors were Israel Ludlow who was crippled some time ago while experimenting with his airship, a kite-like arrangement somewhat similar to Farman's but lacking the motor and propellor wheel. Ludlow was wheeled into have to abandon the idea of making a KIDNAPED GIRL RETURNS Veronica Cassiday of Chicago Says Her Abductor Took Her to Cincinnati.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1 .- Veronica Cassidy, the 12-year-old girl whose mysterious abduction last Thursday caused unusual police activity in this and other cities, returned to her home this evening from Cincinnati, whither she had been taken by her alleged abductor, F. J. Blair. She I sat down. Anna-May Cassidy, Veronica's sister, had spent all of last night with detectives who were seeking traces of the younger girl and, worn out by her grief and labors, she, too, became so ill that medical attendance was

Their grief was heightened by the belief that Blair was identical with Charles B. Hadley, who kidnaped Eleanors Fuller in San Francisco six years ago and later strangled her. Comparisons of photographs, descriptions and handwritings seemingly established this as a fact. Both men came from British Columbia and the police descriptions of the fugitives tallied almost exactly.

Later, however, this supposition was abandoned. A search of the room which Blair had occupied revealed several letters tending to prove that he had been a contractor at Moyle, B. C., one of the documents being a receipted bill for $215 worth of lumber. The epistles proved also that Blair had been in that town as late as June 22.

That Veronica Cassidy escaped a fate similar to that of the San Francisco girl was largely due to the publicity given to the case, according to the belief of the icus, the wrestler, while fishing in Back local police. This theory was borne out river, off Twin Oaks shore, Maryland. by the story of the girl, who said that after Blair had read the newspapers on the morning after their arrival in Cincinnati that he became nervous and appeared worried.

The girl could not remember the name of the hotel to which Blair took her in Cincinnati. Neither could she recall the tame under which Blair registered. The sostelry was near the railroad station, she said, and once they ate a meal at a small Biair, it was learned today, received about 126 answers to his advertisement for a girl companion for his wife. Some of these answers were found in his room. Besides these the police also discovered several sheets of cheap writing paper on ach of which was written in blue penecil, "Must go to Duluth tonight." The handwriting was identical with an address which Blair wrote for Mrs. Cassidy, also with a blue pencil. Many baffling circumstances were discovered by the police, but they thought that few will have any bearing on the final disposition of the case. The following is the police description of

GOT AWAY WITH THE CRANE Hot Tunnie With a Bird Having Bill and Wings to Beat the Band.

A lively battle with a giant crane was fought last Monday night, shortly after midnight, by Deputy Sheriff James Jung and Gus Schoenlin, better known as Amer-Deputy Sheriff Jung and Americus were in a boat some distance from shore when, to their surprise, they were attacked by the big bird. Deputy Sheriff Jung had just hooked a large eel and looked up the crane struck them.

The huge bird beat with its wings and but he was tangled up with the eel, and being unable to offer much defense, was rapidly getting the worst of the encounter when Americus came to the rescue. He seized an oar, but for several seconds could not deliver a blow at the bird for fear of hitting the deputy sheriff. Finally, lowever, he saw his chance to break in under the crane's guard and land a blow with the oar on its long, sinewy neck, The stroke broke the bird's neck and knocked it into the water. The battle broke up the fishing expedition, as the fishermen had an idea that the crane might be one of a party. Both men are at a loss to account for the bird attacking them in such a vicious manner. The only possible reason that they can advance is that the crane wanted the sel and was willing to make a fight for it. The bird was pulled into the boat and taken ashore, where it was hung up near the clubhouse. It was measured and found to have a bill more than a foot long. The bird is being exhibited with considerable pride to all visitors to the shore. Those who have seen it have characterized its bravery as conspicuous, it being the first bird with spunk enough to tackle a champion wrestler and a deputy sheriff at the same time.—Baltimore

FARMAN POSTPONES FLIGHT restaurant in the neighborhood after Biair PAUL BIG IN BODY AND MIND

George R. Wendling Opposes Common View He Was Small.

APOSTLE WAS LARGE PHYSICALLY

World and the Greatest Orator in the Christian World.

George R. Wendling transgressed the ommon theory that Paul, the apostle, was small, insignificant-looking man, in his address yesterday afternoon at the Bellevue chautauqua. He also opposed the popular belief that Paul was a bachelor. He pictured him as a man whose physical figure and force were as powerful and commanding as his intellectual and said that he thought perhaps his wife died before his conversion.

"Saul of Tarsus," the man rather than the great apostle of the Christian faith. was the theme followed by Mr. Wendling. The address was begun by a review of the history of the world which prepared the way for the coming of Christ and the preachers who followed the Master. Saul was described both as the persecutor and the persecuted.

"But after Saul became Paul the apoetle, there was never a thought of turning back," said Mr. Wendling. "Even when he lay outside the city gates of Listera after being stoned and left for dead, did he doubt for a moment that conversion on the road to Damascus? No, he was not yet ready to give up the fight. His years of apostleship were years of labor and almost superhuman suffering, but he never gave up the fight.

Wonders at His Love. "One wonders if there could be any love left in Paul as an old man after all he had gone through. Listen to him as he talks to the Christians. In every city bonds and afflictions await me-but none of these things move me.' He blessed them and when he left them they kissed and wept over the old man who had been scourged and persecuted but who kept the kindness of his heart. "One wonders of the personal appearance of the great man and there are many conflicting opinions. I am convinced that he was not a small or an insignificant looking man. He was a strong man, strong physically, I mean, and probably not one man in a thousand could have gone through the hardships and labors which he sustained to an old age. He must have been one of those men whom people turn to take a second look at, even when they know nothing of him.

"I disagree with most commentators again on the question of his marriage. He must have been a married man. For one thing we know that he voted in the council of the Sanhedrim and no Jew could be a member of that body unless he was a married man. It is probable that his wife died be told her parents that Biair had placed her pounds. And I had to pay again. I fore his conversion and after that he lived a wifeless, childless, homeless life. "He was the bravest man that ever trod the earth. If I were owner of half the thrones of this world and had to choose a general for all of my armies on the basis of physical bravery and moral courage he is the man I would choose.

"He was the greatest orator of Christianity. He was gifted with downright, self-consecrating, self-forgetful earnestness and without that no orator can be great. The reason why in this country, where we have so many conditions favorable to oratory, we have so few great speakers in that the men on the platforms lack this earnestness. More than this, he had all the other qualities and especially self control. Never but once was he angry. orator and the earth still vibrates with his Matt Kibel Uses Knife and is in Turn speech.

"Then at last in Rome. Did he falter at the last the supreme test? No! Dauntless still he says, 'There is laid up the crown of righteousness which the Master has given me.' We hall him as the wondrous apostle and the magnificent martyr." Mr. Wendling was preceded by the Elks' quartet, which sang several pleasing numbers, and Mrs. W. A. Challis, who read three selections. The reading of Mrs. Challis was enjoyable and was appreciatively received.
