RECRUITS BALK AT THE DUST infantry from Fort Crook Soon

FORT RILEY, Kan., Aug. 8.—(Special.)-The Thirteenth infantry, marching from Fort Leavenworth to the maneuver ground on this reservation, arrived this morning a Fort Leavenworth to the maneuver grounds on this reservation, arrived this morning at about noon and immediately went into camp. The last day's march covered about sixteen miles. The last two days' marching has been over roads some of which have been muddy from recent rains. Until that time the dust has been almost unbearable and at times so heavy were the dust clouds that those in the rear of the column were almost strangled. Nearly all of the men, excepting the recruits, have become hardened and cover the day's march without discomfort. A considerable number of recruits have fallen out of ranks every day, however. On Thursday night the command made a night march. Today and tomorrow will be spent in cleaning up, getting the camp in shape and preparing for the long stay of a month.

The two companies of the Third battallen of engineers, which left Fort Leavenworth two days in advance of the Thirteenth infantry, arrived at the maneuver camp Thursday morning about II o'clock. Accompanying the engineer train was a long pontoon train, which will be used in spanning the Kaw. The troops were in excellent condition.

ENOUGH OF ENGLISH "SPORT" Characteristic Actions of Britishers Reform That Looks Like Real Thing Unable to Win by Fair

Menns. It is hard to see how the Englishman ever got als reputation for fair play toxicated men. In a recent article which nd honest sportsmanship. From the he contributed to Leslie's Weekly, Chief days of the Heenan-Sayers fight down Kchler explains his scheme as follows: to the present moment they have played at least against Americans—to win by any means that it might be necessary to treating men as men, even when they are use. The Dictionary of National Biogra- drunk, even when they disturb the peace, phy, a British publication, does its best to make out the English claim in regard

o the Heenan-Sayers fight, which took even then we deal with our prisoners as place in 1860. We quote: Time and against Sayers was knocked lown by blows, each of which seemed sufficient to finish the fight, but he alsufficient to finish the fight; but he always returned good-humored, though serious, and delivered blow after blow on the American's eyes, while on one occasion he actually knocked his opponent down. Heenan, apparently aware that in fighting he could rain no advantage, closed with Sayers whenever possible, and on one occasion got him in such a posstion on the ropes that strangulation waimminent. The ropes were cut, the crowd broke in and the referee was forced from his place; nevertheless a few more rounds were fought, when Heenan, who had hitherto fought fair, behaved in a way which would have lost him the fight had the referee been efficient.
