COMPOSER OF LINCOLN MARCH

Edward Cox Davis, Famous Author, Visits Daughter in Omaha.

ROUNDING OUT NINETIETH YEAR

Though Bent with Age and Affliction He Plays the March Dedicated at Funeral of the Great Emancipator.

Edward Cox Davis, 90 years of age, close personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, composer of the famous "Lincoln Funeral March" and of other popular musical selections, veteran of the civil war, author and newspaper correspondent, is in Omaha visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. John Evans, Twenty-fourth and Ohio streets. Mr. Davis arrived the fore part of the week and expects to stay several weeks. His home is in Des Moines and this is the first time he has visited his sister and son in fourteen years.

Bowed with the weight of his 90 years and bent with rheumatism, but retaining his faculties, the veteran composer still plays the piano and every month writes an article for the newspapers or a magazine, most of his articles dealing with musical matters. He is today the oldest composer in the United States, but the pride of his heart is the march played at the funeral of the martyred president and played simultaneously on that day by bands throughout the nation. Thousands of copies have been printed and sold and the famous composition is generally played in later years on Decoration day or at the funeral of a military officer.

"I wrote the 'Lincoln Funeral March' when General Lyon, whom I greatly admired, was killed while trying to bring order out of chaos in Missouri," said Mr. Davis. "This was in 1862 and while I was living in Quincy, Ill. I sent the manuscript to my publishers, Balmer & Weber, in St. Louis, and asked them to look it over and tell me if it was worth while bringing it out. Their presses were crowded at the time and soon afterward I went into the army and the march was not published.

MUSIC IS PICKED OUT.

"Then, in 1865, President Lincoln was shot. The then famous Silver band of St. Louis was going to Springfield to attend the funeral, and Mr. Balmer, my publisher, was a member of the band. Music of the old famous authors was sorted over, but my little march which I had written three years before and named after General Lyon was picked out as the most appropriate and was hurriedly published under the title of the 'Lincoln Funeral March.' Not only did the Silver band play it at Springfield, but it was played throughout the nation on that day, as it has on other days since."

"I was always a great admirer of Mr. Lincoln—knew him well—and the fact that my march was selected as the one to be played at the funeral of that great man has always been a source of much pleasure and comfort to me. Though there has been so much said about it in the papers and I have been heralded as such an unusual man (and I am just a common sort of a person like yourself) that I begin to feel as did Sherman about the 'Marching Through Georgia' song—it becomes a bore sometimes."

Though his fingers are cramped with rheumatism, the veteran composer offered to play his famous march and he did with wonderful pathos and expression. He played it from memory in excellent time, but, as he finished, a tear trickled down his wrinkled cheek as he told the reporter that it was wicked for him with his bent fingers to try to play the piano. In his home at Des Moines he has an old organ which his publishing house gave him fifty years ago as partial recompence for the great composition and Mr. Davis says he can play much better on that old instrument, with which he is familiar. The composer was never paid for his march.

GARFIELD MEMORIAL DIRGE.

Years after he composed the "Lincoln Funeral March" Edward Cox Davis composed the "Garfield Memorial Dirge," which was played at the funeral of that other martyred martyr. Words have since been set to this dirge and it is sometimes sung under other names than that originally given it by its composer.

Of popular songs Mr. Davis considers his "Only Waiting" as his best work. This piece had a great run in its day. Other compositions to which he adds pride are, "When Youth Is Gone," "Egyptian Girl's Song" and "Song of Night."

Mr. Davis was born in Philadelphia November 25, 1818, and will therefore be 90 years of age next November. He lived in Philadelphia during the early years of his life and there saw a number of great men. He says that in those days Philadelphia was the center of everything and that when anyone went on a trip he invariably went to the Pennsylvania metropolis. He distinctly recalls seeing General Jackson and the famous Indian chiefs, Black Hawk

TEN MEN BEFORE THE BAR

Prisoners Accused of Crime from Larceny to Murder Arraigned in Court.

Ten men accused of crimes from larceny to murder, were arraigned Friday morning before Judge Sears in the district court. Gus Schmidt accused of kicking Lars Jensen to death, July 5th, pleaded not guilty. Hatch Smith, once a colored prize fighter of considerable reputation, declared himself not guilty of shooting Henry Watkins with intent to kill. John Powers pleaded not guilty to the charge of passing a check for $35 signed with the name of George A. Hoagland. Frank Legget, supposed to have taken $75 from a man named Thorstid declared his innocence, and he was followed by Otto Miller and James Ireland who pleaded not guilty of burglary. James A. Alexander, Robert Riley and Field Bean pleaded guilty to burglary and were given three years each. Oscar Albert, who admitted breaking into the grocery store of the Courtney company, was not sentenced as there is some doubt as to his sanity and he will be held in the jail pending an investigation. John Ell pleaded guilty to stealing $10.25 worth of meat when he could not get work, but he was not sentenced. The authorities intend making further examination of the case to discover the condition of the man and his family and the story before he says.

Edward Cox Davis is an interesting man. His memory is not the least shadowed by the weight of years and he is as bright and vivacious as a man half his age. He is a modest man and frequently when his sister would inject a remark he would say:

"Now, Eliza, don't say too much. Remember you are talking to a reporter and I don't want him to write a long story about me."

MAN DOES NOT WANT MUCH

Beats Wife Who Helps Him Make Living Because She Won't Let Him Whip Child When Drunk.

Because his wife, who pines the barber to help him make a living, objected to his beating their daughter while he was drunk, so Mrs. Folan testified in police court. T. P. Folan, 1935 Cuming street, was sentenced to thirty days in jail by Judge Crawford Friday morning.

Folan conducts a barber shop at the Cuming street address and Mrs. Folan is the assistant in the business, working daily beside her husband to help make the family living. Despite this fact, Mrs. Folan testified that she recently pulled her out of bed and chased her down the street in her night clothes Tuesday night and continued his abuses Wednesday and Thursday, threatening to cut her into several pieces when she interfered with his chastisement of their daughter at a time when he was under the influence of liquor.
