THANK YOU FOR WATCHING THIS PAGE HERE IS THE PROPOSITION

During the past sixty days we took advantage of propositions made by the manufacturers we represent and stocked our salesrooms with hundreds of new, 1909 style pianos. Ordinarily these instruments would not arrive until sixty or ninety days later in the season.

To move a portion of this stock immediately, we will give every purchaser who buys a piano from the Schmolzer & Mueller Piano Co. at this time all the advantages in price saving we secured from the manufacturers. This means, to cut a long story short, that a piano selling in the regular course of business for $300 may now be purchased for $175. A piano selling for $350 is offered at $250. One selling at $400 may be purchased for $275. In other words, the door is now open for you to save all the way from $100 to $150 provided you buy now.

Were this the only inducement offered, you certainly ought not to defer the purchase. 'Tis true this saving is the greatest inducement, but think if you please, of the unmatched quality of the instruments we sell. Pianos known over the civilized globe for quality, for perfect construction, for beauty in outline and finish, and for sweetness of tone. Pianos that, when placed in a home, generally stay there for more than one generation.

Perhaps this is a clue to the popularity and absolute trust the music-loving public throughout the west place in the Schmolzer & Mueller Piano Co. The names, the mention of which bring up recollections of all that is to be commended in piano construction—Steinway, Steger, Emerson, Hardman, Mehlin, A. B. Chase, McPhail, Davis & Sons and Schmolzer & Mueller.

Are you, to be honest about it, know of a more illustrious line of pianos to select from? Why defer the purchase when by reason of our forethought in buying ahead of the season it is possible to save not less than $100 and as high as $150 on any piano selected from our stock. Saving that carries with it the possession and not the sacrifice of quality.

Last, we extend to you in this remarkable offer the same credit terms which have made it possible for thousand of piano owners all over the west to own a beautiful, fully guaranteed piano. All the money required during this sale is $10 down and a promise from you to pay $5 a month thereafter.

Really, you cannot, in justice to your home and family, afford to let this opportunity pass by. Come, see these pianos tomorrow, compare the sample prices herewith quoted, compare our statements as to quality and ascertain if our published representations do not match up 100 per cent with what you find in our salesrooms in prices and in quality after a careful, critical visit.

DISPLAY ON LAKE ATTRACTIVE

Storm Accommodatingly Held Off Until the Outdoor Exercises Had Been Concluded and Boats Safely Housed.

Wind and rain could not mar the merry-making of the Rod and Gun club at Cut-off lake Friday evening, for, although it blew a veritable gale and the rain fell in torrents just at the close of the beautiful Venetian carnival, the many hundreds of happy picnickers continued their festivities indoors and when they did go home at a late hour they took only pleasant memories with them.

FARMER TOOK NO CHANCES

Canny Virginian Would Not Leave His Money in Bank at Night.

"Bank officials see many curious sides of human nature," said a prominent Virginian while talking to some old friends in the lobby of a Washington hotel recently. "I spent a week down in a town in Clarke county last month, and one day during my stay there I sauntered into the local national bank just before it closed for the day. While I was talking to the bank teller, a middle-aged countryman came up to the window. He looked both shrewdly and intelligent. The teller broke off talking to me to attend to his duties.

"What can I do for you, sir?" he asked the stranger. "I want to draw out my $300," answered the farmer, handing in his check, payable to self, and his bank book.

"Why, what's wrong?" asked the teller, obviously much astonished. "You only deposited this amount with us this morning."

"I haven't any fault to find with you," returned the farmer, carefully counting his money and putting it in an old leather wallet. "I think these banks are pretty good places, but I reckon I'm not such a darn fool as to leave my money here over night."

"Now, that actually happened," went on the Virginian, as his friends laughed incredulously. "And I'd a heap rather be that over-astute Virginian farmer than as glib as a friend of mine who lives in a rural district in Nebraska. He's a lawyer of some prominence in that state, and as a side line to his law practice he often collects bad debts for city business firms."

"Well, one day last summer a man appeared in his office and said he represented a hardware firm in Lincoln. This firm had a bill of $150 against a farmer living about ten miles outside the village. The lawyer looked over the man's papers and found them apparently all right. Knowing that the farmer was well off and would probably make prompt payment, he agreed to collect the money on the promise of being paid 10 per cent. So when the stranger went out of the office he wrote a note to the farmer, requesting an immediate answer, and posted it."

"Five days later he received a letter from the farmer saying the bill had been over-looked, and inclosing his check for $150 in payment. A little later that morning the city man came in, and the lawyer handing him the letter and enclosure, said:—

"I know he would pay promptly."

"But he has made his check payable to me, and I have to catch the next train to Lincoln. Can you come up to the bank with me at once?" responded the stranger.

"No, I'm particularly busy this morning."

"Oh, all right," replied the stranger. "Just make the check payable to our bank, deducting of course, your commission from the amount."

"So he promptly wrote out a check for $135, gave it to the stranger, and then they parted. The lawyer chuckled all morning over making $15 so easily, but the laugh changed to a curse when he went to the bank and found the farmer's check was a good forgery.

DARK DAYS IN SOUTHLAND

Pathetic Wall from the Paved Throat of an Editor in the Dry District.

Colonel S. L. Slover, publisher of the Ledger-Dispatch of Norfolk, Va., finished writing out directions concerning the making of a julep, dispatched them by the hall boy, and then turned a pair of mellow, brown eyes on his interviewer in his sitting room in the Hotel Knickerbocker, New York City.

"It's sholy a serious business, suh," he said, in reply to a question as to the increase of prohibition in the south. "The last time I was in Georgia I saw a general of our confederate forces with his tongue so far down over his chin, suh, that I thought he was wearin' a red necktie. It was a little town where there wasn't any club, an' if I hadn't had a few drops in my flask to spare him we'd have had another Napoleon pass into the valley of the shadow."

"Only this very week the statesmen of Georgia passed a law putting a heavy tax on what they call 'near-beer' in that state. It's a harmless, an' to some people, a refreshing beverage, but the prohibition party don't like near-beer and so those as do like it must pay high for it."

"Now, where does the personal liberty of a gentleman come in, suh?"

"The hall boy entered with the juleps and was greeted with a groan of despair from the colonel.

"My Gawd, suh!" he exclaimed, "will you look at those juleps. Dined if that fool bartender hasn't decorated the tops of 'em until they look like a couple of Merry Widow ladies," declared the colonel, "and told him in my directions to eschew the daghata. No julep's fit to drink when it's stabbed with a slice of orange, speared with a glab of pineapple, and riddled with cherries. It's cruel murder, suh, cruel murder, an' nothin' less."

"The boy was sent away to have the juleps 'undressed.'"

"Yes, suh," the colonel resumed, "it looks like we've fallen on evil days sho enough."

"Now, that actually happened," went on the Virginian, as his friends laughed incredulously. "And I'd a heap rather be that over-astute Virginian farmer than as glib as a friend of mine who lives in a rural district in Nebraska. He's a lawyer of some prominence in that state, and as a side line to his law practice he often collects bad debts for city business firms."

LIMITS TO GLOBE TROTTING

Some Sections of the World beyond the Reach of Ambitious Tourists.

Enterprising tourist agents profess a willingness to carry the holiday-maker anywhere on the earth and bring him back again in safety. But in making this offer they are, in fact, promising just a little too much. In spite of all that explorers have done, there are still bits of the world as completely "barred" to the average traveler as those private parks, at the gates of which notices are stuck to the effect that trespassers will be prosecuted.

We talk a great deal about the white man's power in India. Does it surprise you to know that there is a country in India, forming an integral portion of the empire, which no ordinary Briton is allowed to enter?

This is Nepal, whose maharajah has been sojourning with us this summer. By virtue of ancient treaty Europeans are "barred" from the kingdom. They are not allowed to live, or trade, or even travel in it. The only white men tolerated in Nepal are the British resident and his limited suite.

Tibet is still a sealed kingdom to the average man. No white strangers are welcomed in the capital, Lassa, and, if you want to pay a visit to the grand lama, your only safe course is to go with an army. If you cannot afford the army you would better stay away.

Corea, too, for centuries a sealed land, known as the "Hermit Kingdom," into which no white man was suffered to penetrate. It was practically unknown to the outside world until the Japanese broke into it.

The archipelago of Terra del Fuogo is another part of the world where tourists are not invited. The interior of some of the islands in the "Land of Fire" has to this day never been trodden by a white man's foot, and one of the tribes, the Tahgans, are little better than human monkeys.

Many of them are not much over four feet high with wrinkled skins of cork, without and inside, and ferocious tempers. They are cannibals, who eat all their old people, and they are far worse devil worshippers than the Kazahs, which is saying a great deal.

A large part of the big Dutch possession, the island of Java, has never been explored, and in the forests, for many miles, the air is so poisonous that no man can breathe it.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

City Building Inspector Withnell and Mrs. Withnell and son returned Friday from a week's trip through the Black Hills and a short visit with their son, who has a ranch near Hermon, S. D. Mr. Withnell says that the bridges over the rivers and creeks in the Hills are out in many places and travel by team is slow. Due to the lack of late rains, but few ears have formed on the corn, though there is an excellent prospect of a second crop, which is known as the richest 100 square miles in the world.

"Tenting It" by the shady banks of some lovely inland lake or noble river, well stocked with fish—is a most healthy and delightful experience, particularly if (with judicious forethought) a case of two of GUND'S PEERLESS BEER. In the afternoon of a hot, fatiguing day, a few foaming glasses of this famously rich and refreshing malt and hop brew, add wonderfully to the rest and enjoyment of picnicking, yachting, fishing or outing parties. Indeed, for vacation and holiday purposes, the snappy thirst-quenching and exhilarating qualities of Peerless have made it always "first choice" by men who know. Mail orders invited.
