

MINT AND TOBACCO WIN OUT

These Delectable Staples Get Convention for Old Louisville.

OMAHANS ENJOY STAY AT K. C.

Secure Election of Robert H. Manley as Director of Association of Ad Clubs of America.

With Robert H. Manley as a member of the board of directors of the Associated Ad Clubs of America, the Omaha delegation to the fourth annual convention of the clubs held at Kansas City this week, returned home Saturday morning.

Mr. Manley is advertising manager for J. L. Brandeis & Sons and was a favorite with the advertising men from the moment he walked into the secretary's office at the Baltimore hotel and said something about his business being to bring business to business men by business method and the business he got was their business.

Then the papers taken Manley for vice president, but the association rubbed out the numerous vice presidents and Mr. Manley was given the directorship.

Omaha was with Louisville for the next convention and Louisville got it after the most unique campaign ever conducted in Kansas City to secure a convention. The Louisville men opened headquarters on the parlor floor of the Baltimore hotel, securing several rooms. They decorated an entrance and put up an arbor green. Then they decorated the walls with tobacco leaves and perfume the rooms with mint leaves, serving gallons of mint julep from a huge cut glass punch bowl. Little jugs of "Old Kentucky" were distributed among the guests and next to the pure food label was this verse:

Little brown jug,
With mint entwined;
Come to Louisville
In nineteen-nine.

Nevada Better Treated.

"We were never better entertained than in Kansas City," said Mr. Manley. "The week has been a most enjoyable one." From the start, the Omahans let it be known that they did not expect the next convention and did not want the office, but they did want every delegate present to remember the National Corn exposition to be held in Omaha December 9 to 19. The souvenirs of the corn show were among the most beautiful at the convention and among those most in demand.

Those who attended the convention were Robert Manley, J. L. Brandeis & Sons, J. D. Weaver and George L. Duncan of the Bee, Will A. Campbell of the Bee and the publicity department of the National Corn exposition, Richard J. Skanke of Thompson, Belden & Co., Stanley Hartman of the Hartman Fur and Carpet company, Will F. Pease Bros. company, Frank W. Harwood and John O. Siford of the Omaha Gunning system.

Automobile Sensation Season is On.

Announcements of 199 models, prices and plans are almost daily occurrences now, and with the cannon of these announcements booming on every side the general public is sitting up and taking an awful lot of notice.

One is impressed with the heralded wonder of some heretofore unheard-of proposition that is to revolutionize the automobile industry. Another, with new policy or models of some of the old standard makers, the latter appealing more strongly to the old guards who have learned that there are disadvantages in being the first to try out any new principle and generally wait a season's results of any new proposition before they seriously consider it.

There is a slight tendency this year on the part of the old standard concerns to follow the lead of some of the foreign makers in manufacturing several sizes, embodying the same principle, material, design, etc., except as to power and size, at proportionate prices in machines of graded sizes.

There is no question but what the need of such a policy has long been felt. One would often hear the remark, "I like such and such a car very much, in fact, the best of any on the market; it is a peach, but it is too large for my purpose." While, on the other hand, another would say, "If I could only get a touring car as good as my little runabout I would be satisfied."

Now, it certainly looks as though the manufacturer who has built a successful popular car and now brings out several sizes and styles of the same at proportionate prices is going to get in right. That this is a popular idea is shown by a few of the old standard makers' announcements in this direction for 1909.

One of the most impressive of these announcements seems to be that of the Stoddard-Dayton people, who have recently announced three different sizes of 35, 35 and 40 horsepower, ranging in size from the small runabout up through the roadster and to tonneau designs to the big seven-passenger touring car, each different size being made exactly the same as its big brother or little sister, except all parts are proportioned for that particular size.

The best foreign makers, such as the Renault, Fiat, Mercedes and many others, have followed this practice for years, but it seems to have remained for the Stoddard-Dayton to set the pace in this country, and it is believed it will meet with popular approval.

Mr. Davidson Misses Brother—S. Davidson of Denver, brother of Superintendent W. M. Davidson of the city schools, came to Omaha Saturday, but was disappointed in finding that the superintendent had not returned from his vacation. Mr. Davidson will next week at Lincoln, at the State fair in the interest of an automobile firm with which he is connected, but expects to come to Omaha again and see his brother before returning to Denver. Superintendent Davidson is expected home Monday.

Boy Hurt by Automobile—Michael Pitzer, a 12-year-old boy living at 301 Kervan street, who is employed as a messenger for the Missouri Pacific railroad, was knocked down by a heavy freight automobile at the Illinois freight depot shortly after 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon and sustained a badly sprained back. The machine was backing away from the depot and struck the boy until it jammed him against another wagon. He was attended by Police Surgeon Fitzgibbon and taken home in the police ambulance.

Woman Kicked by Man—Angered because she refused to have anything more to do with him, Charles Swindell knocked Sussie Duffy down and kicked her in the left side over the heart, fracturing several ribs. Both are colored. The quarrel occurred in the women's room at Twelfth and Davenport streets about 1:15 Saturday afternoon. After rendering the woman unconscious Swindell made his escape. When she regained consciousness the woman crept to a neighbor's, where Police Surgeon Smith was called. Her condition is considered serious.

Mother and Daughter at Issue—Mother as plaintiff and daughter as defendant in the unusual situation in an equity suit filed in district court Saturday morning. Mrs. Julia Offenbacher started the suit against Miss Julia Ann Offenbacher, her daughter, and the question involved is as to the ownership of a lot in Hamilton square. Mrs. Offenbacher asserts she bought the property of Otto A. Johnson for $2,500 and because she was in poor health had the deed made out to her daughter in trust. She says it was the understanding of her daughter was to deed the lot to her or to anyone she might direct. Now she says her daughter refuses to turn the property over to her.

Repairing of Dundee Streets—Efforts of Dundee residents to improve the east end of Dodge street resulted in a resolution passed by the county board Saturday morning promising that the county would repair the street from Forty-eighth to Fifty-second streets as soon as the village of Dundee had put in catch basins, storm sewers, curbs and gutters. The road is now in bad condition and the board took the position it would do no good to repair it until the village improvements had been made. As the report of the State Board of Equalization on terminal assessments had not been received the board could not make the annual levy Saturday. An adjournment was taken until Monday, when it is hoped the report will be in the hands of the board.

"Booh" Was His Name. Magistrate Harris had a little difficulty in the night court recently over the name of Oscar Booh, a 4-foot 4-inch grocer, who was a witness in a recent case. Magistrate Harris asked him his name and what he saw of the grocer. "Booh, I saw these two—the big witness and me," said the magistrate interrupted him.

"What do you mean by booh, sir?" Kindly answered my question and give me the witness' name. "Again he was interrupted. "John," asked Magistrate Harris of the bridge officer, "is this man intoxicated or crazy?"

"Mr. Judge, I know this man. He lives in my neighborhood and his name is Oscar Booh. He didn't 'Oh, booh,'" explained the policeman.

"O-o-o-oh!" Now I understand," said Magistrate Harris; and the witness testified. —New York Sun.

MANSS AND HIS LITTLE JOKE

Chicago Commercial Agent Talks of Wiping Omaha Off Map.

REVEALS PLOT AT SALT LAKE

Tells How Four Railroad Presidents Are in the Game—Follow is an Ex-Precache from Lincoln.

"Rev." William H. Manss, former pastor of the First Congregational church at Lincoln, now "industrial" commissioner of the Chicago Commercial association," proposes to "wash Omaha off the railroad map as a freight point" even as he used to wash away sine.

Rev. Mr. Manss represented Chicago at the recent meeting of the executive committee of the National Wool Growers' association and there made known the plot with the presidents of several western trunk lines to "wipe Omaha off the map."

The former Lincoln pulpit orator met a college mate at Salt Lake city, who is a reporter on the Deseret News (Mormon). According to the reporter, Manss "let him into the secrets of what is the largest boosting organization in the world," referring to the Chicago Commercial association.

When these college mates came together Manss had to give up the conspiracy to his old fraternity brother and the doom of Omaha is announced in flaring headlines in the Mormon organ. Marked copies have reached Omaha shippers and members of the Commercial club, who are preparing to return to the great farm of the west as soon as Manss and his friend in Zion get their railroad presidents to working to "cleanse Omaha off the map."

"The announcement that the presidents of four western trunk lines, presumably the Union Pacific, Chicago and Northwestern, Great Northern and Burlington, and the mid-western Gould lines have agreed to make a through freight route from western shipping points to Chicago, will be a bomb thrown into the Omaha camp," says the Deseret Evening News. "At the present time a route to Missouri river is inevitable and is one argument that has been used as an argument by those opposed to storage (of wool)."

Quite a Big Joker. Then in letting the reporter into the conspiracy Manss furnishes the following information:

With this announcement the Chicago boosters hope to completely wipe out opposition from Omaha. They declare that the action of the railway people will wipe Omaha off the railroad map as a freight point. To accomplish a reduction in the shipping rates on wool the Chicago men declare that through rates must also be made on other commodities in order to escape the operation of the inter-commerce act with regard to favoring any one class of shippers or any one commodity and other shippers.

Local railroad men deny any knowledge of any such move on the part of railroad presidents, and as the Great Northern Railway company makes a "Missouri river route" to Omaha, the expositure of "Rev." Mr. Manss is considered as quite a serious joke for a representative of Chicago commercial interests to play on Omaha.

RARE CASE OF PARALYSIS

Philadelphia Man Suffers from Effects of Inhaled Cigarette Smoke.

In the strange seizure of Alvah McCreeary, a well known real estate broker, with offices in the Penn Square building, who was stricken with what appeared to be a form of paralysis while inhaling the fumes of a cigarette on June 23, physicians believe they are confronted with a case unique in medical history.

Owing to the desire of Mr. McCreeary's family to avoid publicity, news of the real estate man's remarkable seizure has been kept secret until the present time. For a long time he hovered on the brink of the grave, but yesterday had so far recovered that he was able to take an automobile ride.

Mr. McCreeary, who, it is said, had been a habitual cigarette smoker, was residing with his wife at the home of Dr. Mercer, at 1706 Arch street, early this summer. On the morning of June 23 he arose early as was his custom, and lighted a cigarette. After inhaling the fumes of the cigarette he felt weak, and lay down and went over and lay down on the bed again.

Ten minutes later, when he tried to arise, he found himself unable to move. Supposing that he had suffered a sudden stroke of paralysis, Mr. McCreeary called to his wife, who summoned Dr. Mercer. The doctor, found, upon examination, that Mr. McCreeary was suffering from some strange malady which, although he was not paralyzed in the ordinary sense in any part of the body and his mental faculties remained perfectly clear, prevented him from moving.

Investigation on the part of the specialists who were called in disclosed the fact that a blood clot had formed at the base of the brain. The result of this information was to prevent Mr. McCreeary from moving for weeks, and the only cause for it that the physicians have been able to discover was the action of the fumes of the cigarette.

For several weeks the application of mustard plasters to the feet and other remedies to reduce the size of the clot proved ineffectual. An operation was then decided upon, and proved successful.

Strict instructions were given by the doctors to the two trained nurses who watched over Mr. McCreeary during the long period of convalescence that under no circumstances must he be permitted to smoke a cigarette, as if he did a recurrence of the blood clot was probable. Dr. Mills told members of the McCreeary family that in all his experience he never knew of a parallel case. —Philadelphia Inquirer.

NEW HEAD OF BRITISH NAVY

Fighting Politician of the House of Commons Made First Lord of the Admiralty.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—It is no secret that Reginald McKenna, who was president of the Board of Education in the Campbell-Bannerman ministry, has been promoted to the post of first lord of the admiralty to get him out of the way. Not that this strenuous son of an Irish father is an undesirable colleague in the eyes of the new prime minister; on the contrary he is looked upon, and with good reason, as one of the conspicuous successes of the education department.

But he is a born fighter. He does not know what the word compromise means, and these are days when the spirit of compromise is very much needed in the department which Mr. McKenna has just vacated. The new education bill which he brought into Parliament, has aroused no end of antagonism in many quarters, and the admiral feels for some time that it were best for the government to meet the objectors at least half way.

Mr. McKenna was obviously not the man to hold out the olive branch; he was for fighting it out to the last ditch. So he was a conscientiously shifted. Incidentally his salary will be $10,000 to $12,500 a year, and he has just been married on the strength of his advance.

In his new position Mr. McKenna will have plenty of opportunities for putting his fighting qualities of mind into play. For some time past a large element in England has bemoaned the weakness of character of the retiring Lord Tweedmouth and have sighed for a successor strong enough to give battle to the very active opponents of the government's naval policy.

Mr. McKenna's first jump into fame was on a memorable occasion in 1904, when, as an untried member of the House of Commons and crossed swords with Austen Chamberlain, then chancellor of the exchequer. It was all due to a duty on striped tobacco, which the son of the great protectionist had introduced into the budget. The young McKenna attacked the chancellor's tobacco duty, and without gloves. The affair created a mild sensation and to save the day, Mr. Balfour, then prime minister, was compelled to turn his fraternal battery upon the daring young member. McKenna was not slow to follow up the advantage he had thus won, and before the unionist government went out of power he had established a reputation as an expert in financial matters.

When the liberals succeeded to power his reward was the office of financial secretary to the treasury. A little later when Mr. Bryce, who was then secretary for Ireland, went to London, Mr. McKenna was promoted to the post which the diplomat vacated. McKenna was raised to full cabinet rank as president of the Board of Education. This after only twelve years of parliamentary life and at the unusually youthful age of 40 years.

In his school days the new lord of the admiralty was a famous athlete. He was educated at King's college, London, and Trinity hall, Cambridge. At the latter institution besides winning a scholarship and high honors in mathematics, he was rowing in the university eight and winner of the Grand and Stewards' cups at Henley.

He has always been a rigid disciplinarian. When a youth he was troubled with a slight stammer. For years he read aloud for an hour every day and today the stammer never troubles him unless he is deeply moved. He keeps up his rowing even to this day, despite the press of public duties and he may be seen any Sunday morning on the Thames in the vicinity of Datchet, taking this form of exercise with vigor and enthusiasm that would do credit to a candidate for a university crew.

RECORD OF E. B. QUACKENBUSH

What He Did for the Terminal Tax Bill During Last Session of Legislature.

During the last legislative session, at the request of Mr. W. G. Ure, for the Omaha Real Estate exchange, together with Mr. Victor Rosewater and Mr. Ure, the writer attended all sessions at which the terminal tax bill was under consideration.

As is well known, the terminal tax bill was in grave danger during its entire course. While it was passed on final call with a margin of five votes, on the preceding crucial ballots it passed by the narrow margin of but two votes.

Mr. E. B. Quackenbush, an attorney of Auburn, Neb., now a candidate for the democratic nomination for attorney general, was then a member of the legislature. The friends of the terminal tax bill appealed first to Mr. Quackenbush, as one of the most influential members of the house. After careful consideration, Mr. Quackenbush gave the bill his earnest support, and on doing so carried with him several of his democratic colleagues, thereby contributing the balance of power necessary to carry the bill to its passage.

There is absolutely no question but that every voter in Omaha, South Omaha and, in fact, in every city and town in the state, owes to Mr. Quackenbush consideration for his splendid efforts in behalf of the terminal taxation bill.

Mr. Quackenbush is a man of the highest integrity and of exceptional legal ability. He would honor the attorney generalship, had he certainly merited the democratic nomination. Sincerely,
J. A. C. KENNEDY.

THE HOME OF QUALITY CLOTHES

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE NEW STORE

16TH AND HOWARD STREETS

After his retirement, March 5th, 1907, from a local firm then bearing his name, Mr. John A. Swanson, having traveled extensively, decided that no city in the country was so much in need of a clothing store, such as he contemplated, as was Omaha. He therefore organized the new firm of King-Swanson Co., with the avowed intention of giving to Omaha a store as beautiful and as complete as any in the country, to be conducted along lines differing greatly from any other in the middle west.

The consummation of his plans resulted in Omaha's first truly modern clothing store, "The Home of Quality Clothes," which now extends a cordial greeting to the public and invites every man, woman and child in the city and vicinity to be present at the
