Dr. Hyde Gives Hanscom Park Congregation Reasons for Optimism. 'Reasons for Optimism' was the subject of the sermon preached by Rev. R. "The Idler" is a really strong handling of the factors of the eternal triangle, the has it in his power to save the husband of the woman he professes to love, and together lovable, and her husband is both Mr. Stockton Heth entertained as his frank and brave, and just stupidly selfish ought to be thinking of his wife's good of the drama is given more than ordinarily force by the method of approach.

The piece is of value in that it gives Miss Elliott some opportunity for serious work, and this opportunity she fully takes advantage of. Her attack on "emotional" scenes is excellent. She has the faculty of expressing deep emotions with force and intensity, and yet without tearing to tatters the passion she feels. In the third act, when she appeals first to the man who professes to love her, then to her husband, who ought to love her, pleading with the one for her husband's life and her own good name, and with the other that he be not swayed by appearances but by reason, she is especially fine. She then shows a loving woman's heart torn in a whirlwind of fear, doubt and anxious desire, and it won for Miss Elliott the tribute of many curtain calls at each performance yesterday. In the second and fourth acts she also has some serious situations, and does them thoroughly well. Mr. Grew plays the part of Mark Cross with good taste and good judgment, showing him first as a man who forgot his manhood to achieve possession of the nome of Mr. and Mrs. Connell on St. woman he loved, and then by his remorse the enormity of his offense. It was a very of the husband, and shows himself capable Cudaby will serve as best man, and Messrs. finds himself in a role that gives him a and the chance is not lost. Mr. Bacon has another of the comedy roles that he fits so easily into, and gives his usual finished performance.

After Miss Elliott Miss Stearns has the best opportunity on the feminine side of the bill. She has the part of a girl who is a combination of enfant terrible and preternatural wisdom, and is at all times decidedly pert. But in it all she is un strained and makes her points without efpicnic at the park and sold twenty-coupon Flanagan. Myra Whiddon, Trede Jones. fort.
