STATE WINS POINT

I am going to object, and am prepared to argue that this part of her story cannot be admitted.

The county attorney replied that he would be glad to see put his questions that the witness would not be compelled to trespass on ground which Mr. Gurley wanted to reserve for argument.

"Call Abbie Rice," said Mr. English, when A. W. Larson, street car foreman, had given some information about the time certain cars passed Fortieth and Farnam streets.

"How old are you?"

"I was 19 last November—the 20th."

Then the 19-year-old girl, with worldly experience of a woman twice her age and the face of one older, told of her early life, being born in Allerton, Ia., the daughter of a constable, of moving with the family to Des Moines and her marriage to Irving Rice, a private in the United States army, in 1906. She said they were married by a United Brethren minister, but she did not remember his name. Then she told of going to Cuba when her husband's regiment was ordered there, of her return to the United States and that she did not know the whereabouts of her husband.

Gives Dates Directly.

Almost every date asked for by the prosecutor was given with directness by the woman.

"When did you leave Des Moines for Omaha?"

"December 2, 1907."

"When did you meet Dr. Rustin?"

"December 20, 1907."

She told how she lived at Grace Walton's resort at 912 Douglas street and the landlady called Dr. Rustin to take care of her when it became apparent she was going to need an operation. She said Dr. Rustin performed two operations on her at the Clarkson hospital, one in January and the other in February of the present year.

"When you left the hospital where did you go?"

"To Grace Walton's."

"Did you see Dr. Rustin there?"

"Almost every day."

Mrs. Rice said she lived at Walton's until May 1, when she went to Council Bluffs and lived at the Grand hotel for two months. She swore that there she saw Dr. Rustin every day and that he spent almost all of his time with her to the neglect of his practice.

After Mrs. Rice left the Grand hotel she says she secured two rooms at 714 North Sixteenth street with a woman named Mrs. Manning and there she was with the physician daily, going from the Manning boarding house to the Loyal hotel the latter part of August, where she stayed a week. She said she saw Dr. Rustin daily, and they left the hotel because the proprietor requested them to leave.

Closing of Rustin Career.

This testimony brought the story to the dates comprising the closing chapters of Dr. Rustin's life, and the woman told in reply to questions of how the physician told her of his business affairs; that he had no money and no practice, many debts and some notes at the First National bank. "As to his insurance I understood he had almost $100,000, which was all payable to his wife," said the woman.

"Did he ever take up the question of taking his life to secure this insurance?"

"He did."

"When?"

"About a month before his death."

"How did he come to do it?"

"He wanted to end his life."

"How?"

"He wanted me to kill him."

"Why?"

"So it would not be suicide?"

"Did he explain?"

"Yes, he said the family could not get the insurance if it was suicide and he only arguments he used to get me to kill him were that I must do it for the sake of his wife and children so they could live comfortably."

"Did you accede to his demands?"

"I did."

"Did preparations were made?"

"He bought a gun."

Mrs. Rice then related the incidents connected with the first gun secured by Dr. Rustin for her to shoot him. It was secured at a pawnshop in Omaha, taken to the Loyal hotel, where she was sent for arrifiges. She bought the shells and took them to the hotel. While trying to load it she took out a screw which put the hammer to the bad and she went to Council Bluffs with Dr. Rustin to get it repaired.

English Produces Gun.

Attorney English produced a .33-caliber revolver and gave it to the witness.

"Is that the gun?" he asked.

"It looks like the one—I can see scratches on the side near the screw, which I believe to be the one I took out with a silver knife at the Hotel Loyal."

Mrs. Rice said this incident was two weeks and three days previous to the morning Dr. Rustin was shot, and it was then planned for her to go with the physician to his office Sunday evening, August 18, where she was to shoot Dr. Rustin and escape from the building.

The shooting was to take place quite late. "She was in an unconcerned sort of way. We wanted to wait until people were off the street, but not until the street cars stopped, as we expected them to make noise enough to deaden the sound of the shot."

But the gun was broken and the couple could not fix it. They had to postpone the "job," as Mrs. Rice called it.

County Attorney English had the woman describe where she was to stand with relation to the physician and where she was to shoot him. "Far enough away so there would be no powder burns, and I was going to shoot him in the abdomen so he could live a few days," she said.

"Did he ever say anything about taking his own life?"

"Never."

"Did he ever talk of being killed by someone else?"

"Yes."

"Some one called Charley?"

"Yes, Charles E. Davis."

All of this testimony came without an objection from the defense, but Attorney Gurley kept warning the woman and the county attorney that they were getting about as far as he proposed to have them without objection and argument and that they must go slowly. When County Attorney English asked this question the climax with Mr. Gurley was reached.

"When Dr. Rustin returned to you in the private room after being out to consult this person, was there anything then said by him with reference to any change in his plans with reference to his death?"

"Mr. Gurley announced that he was ready for the argument right then and that Mr. Woodrough would present the arguments for the defense against admitting hearsay testimony."

Mr. Woodrough had a big pile of law books and argued for an hour, after which adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock. County Attorney English began arguing when the hearing was called at 2 o'clock.

Evidence on Revolver.

The court and attorneys agreed to adjourn until 9:30 Saturday morning, but at the request of Mr. English the principals were called back and the testimony of Samuel Friedman, the Council Bluffs pawnbroker, was taken. Friedman, who conducts a pawn shop at 228 Broadway, Council Bluffs, testified that a man answering to the description of Dr. Rustin had entered his store with a revolver which he desired repaired immediately. Friedman informed Rustin that it would be impossible to repair the gun at once, and offered to trade a similar revolver for the broken one, providing Rustin would pay one dollar in addition, which was done and Rustin left the store, with the gun which is believed to have caused his death, but which has not yet been found.

Return to the Barn.

Then the woman told of their return to the barn and the most dramatic incident in her life—of being alone for two hours in a barn three miles from the city with a man who was begging her to shoot him and alternately threatening to kill her if she did not. Of Dr. Rustin calmly stepping back a few feet from her, with his hands behind him and his coat back, saying, "Shoot me now—shoot me now."

Without emotion the woman declared she did not raise the gun to shoot, but replied, "I cannot do it, doctor—I cannot do it."

Then the physician grappled with her, wrenched the gun from her hand and struggled in the darkness of the barn.

"I begged him not to kill me," she said, "and he stayed there about two hours—until after the cars stopped, and we took a carriage for Omaha; the doctor going into his own home and calling me. He told me if I did not shoot him that evening I would have to do it some time anyway."

Between this dramatic and tragic scene in the barn, the woman told of the lapse of time until Tuesday evening, September 1, the evening before Dr. Rustin was shot. She told of seeing him almost daily at the Millard hotel and the place of the Gleason woman on Twelfth and Douglas streets. She said she stayed with her at the Gleason place almost all day September 1, going to his office about 1:30 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

"When you went to the office in the afternoon did you see a man there?"

"Yes."

"Had the physician abandoned the idea of your killing him?"

"Yes."

"Did he do this before he saw anyone else?"

"No."

"He left you to go out and see some one?"

"Yes."

"Did you know who he went out to see?"

"No."

"Did you afterward ascertain who it was?"

"Yes."

"Who?"

"Some one called Charley."

"Do you know who it was now?"

"Yes, Charles E. Davis."

TRAINS FOR THE BIG PARADE

Northwestern Line Has Its Service All Well Arranged.

The Northwestern has announced its special train service from Omaha after the big electrical parade next Wednesday night. Officials of the Northwestern say their service is so arranged into Omaha that special trains will be needed to bring the people to the carnival. They say they are assembling all the extra equipment of the Northwestern road for handling people to the Tripp country opening in South Dakota and that these cars will be on hand for use to bring people to Ak-Sar-Ben.

A special will leave Omaha Wednesday night at 11:30 for Carroll, Ia., stopping at all intermediate points. A special will leave Omaha at 11:40 Wednesday night for Norfolk, stopping at Irvington to Arlington inclusive and Council Bluffs to Norfolk inclusive. Another special will leave Omaha at 11:50 for Lincoln making no intermediate stops between Omaha and Fremont, and connection at Fremont with coach accommodations for Superior and Hastings. Another special will leave Omaha at 11:50 Wednesday night for Oakdale via Scribner and Albion, stopping at Nickerson, Hooper, Scribner and all intermediate stations Scribner to Oakdale, inclusive. The road has sent out thousands of attractive folders in Ak-Sar-Ben colors telling of the low rates and the big show which Omaha is putting on this fall.

TELL Y. M. C. A. ABOUT ROOMS

Bureau of Information for Benefit of Visitors.

The Young Men's Christian association has opened a bureau of information where visitors are invited to go to find out what they desire to know. Rooms will be listed there and those who desire a place to stay will be furnished a list of rooms and the rate charged. Secretary Babcock is in charge of this work.

In order to facilitate the work of the association parties having rooms to rent during the festivities are requested to list the same with the association, giving the name, location, number of rooms for rent; how many single men or single women can be accommodated; how many married couples. The association also desires to know whether board will be furnished and at what rate per meal, and by what car line the house can be reached. The association will list rooms by mail or by telephone.

The opening of this bureau of information the officials of the carnival say will make it possible for people coming to the parade to remain over to the Taft speaking and the remainder of the festivities without having to spend half of their time looking for a place to stay. It also means, they say, that every visitor can be taken care of, with no trouble to the visitor.

GOVERNOR WILL VISIT HIGHWAY

He Will Take a Run Out of One of Those Branches.

Next Thursday night among the prominent visitors to Ak-Sar-Ben will be Governor Sheldon of Nebraska. The governor recognizes no king but Ak-Sar-Ben and he will add his dignified person to the throng which will gather in the big city to do honor to the mightiest and most lovable of rulers.

The governor sends word that he will go through King's Highway, taking in every show and everything. He will even ride one of the bucking jackasses, or try it. And when you take consideration that the governor was reared on a farm where breaking bronchos was a pastime, it's worth while to think of this feature.

BOYS' SCHEME FAILS TO WORK

Juveniles Start in on Little Craft and Police Officer Gets Them.

Carnival graft, conducted in a most virulent form, considering the age of its promoters, seems to have come to light in the arrest of three juveniles who are said to be the owners of a thriving shoe shine holdup game. It is said that the youngsters, who are only about 15 years of age, agree with some "E. Z. Mark" to shine their victim's shoes for a dime, and then refuse to finish the job after polishing one boot unless another dime is forthcoming. Patrolman Bitter arrested Roy Eirod of 314 Hickory street, Ed Skellenger of 422 Hickory street, and Stanford Wheeler of Sixth and Cass streets late Thursday afternoon on charges of incorrigibility in connection with the bootblack game, and the lads were turned over to Juvenile Officer Mory Bernstein.

Brilliant Decorations in Honor of Ak-Sar-Ben Guests

The merchants of Omaha have spared no expense on decorations in honor of the guests to Ak-Sar-Ben's court and as the result the show windows throughout the entire business district are ablaze with most brilliant colors. Probably the most beautiful of these are the Benson & Thorne Co.'s windows at 1515-1517 Douglas St. One of the novel features of these decorations is that no cloth is used in the entire display. One seldom sees a more perfect hanging on the Ak-Sar-Ben courts. These windows were planned and executed by Mr. A. V. Houston, who has recently come to the Benson & Thorne Co. from an eastern house and is planning several unique displays for the near future.

MESSAGES FROM THE DEAD

Latest Lot of "Communication" Declared to Be a Mass of "Drooling Idiocy."

Months and months ago certain eminent members of the British Society for Psychical Research made what are always with usual solemnity the portentous announcement that at last they had received from the dead communications of a character so convincing that even the most skeptical of scientists would have to give up his doubts as to the possibility of such messages. Recently a special cable dispatch from London presented what it is fair to assume were fair specimens of these new "proofs," and it must be confessed that they were about the scariest chinks ever hatched by prolonged incubation.

Some of the communications, presumably typical of the great mass printed in the latest volume of the society's journal, were prose and some were verse, and it would be hard to tell which were the most likely to convict the author, whether dead or alive, of drooling idiocy. The poetry, indeed, was rather worse as poetry than the prose as prose, but the latter was about as bad as it could be, so far as its evidential value went, for it gave not even one vaguest hint of a super or extra terrestrial origin. Matter and means were alike familiar, for what is or pretends to be "automatic writing" can be and daily is obtained in limitless quantity and precisely similar quality from dozens and dozens of shabby back parlors over on Third avenue.

To none except those whose belief requires no evidence are these dull and trivial productions of more than pathological interest, and to none other can they have any more weight than do the frequent hallucinations which enable the dying and the sick to "see" the places and personages depicted by the painters of pious legend and allegory. Why Sir Oliver Lodge, who really is, or has been, a scientist, though his prestige as such is much greater out of than in scientific circles, should countenance and magnify this dreary nonsense is a mystery—and in kindness, perhaps, had better be left open.—New York Times.

CHOLERA INFANTUM Is Not to be Feared

The mother who has the foresight to keep a bottle of Wakefield's Blackberry Balsam in the house ready for sudden attacks of Cholera Infantum or Diarrhoea has no real fear of these diseases.

The thousands of babies (as well as adults) who die each year from summer bowel troubles could be saved if this excellent remedy were kept in the house where it could be reached when the trouble first appears.

Wakefield's Blackberry Balsam has been used in hundreds of thousands of cases in both babies and adults in the past 62 years with nothing but most favorable results. It is positive and quick in its action yet it is harmless and does not constipate the bowels. It simply checks the trouble and puts the stomach and bowels back in their natural state. A full size bottle costs but 35c at any drug store and may be worth thousands of dollars to you within the next 24 hours by saving the life of a baby or some other member of your family. Can you afford to let another day go by without a bottle or two of this remedy on hand?

Read this letter:

Cholera Infantum Cured

Last summer one of my neighbors came running to my house and asked for a bottle of Wakefield's Blackberry Balsam. He had Cholera Infantum, and he was afraid it would not live till he could get a doctor. I said "Wakefield's Blackberry Balsam will cure the child, and I have some here." I gave it one-half teaspoonful, and in a half-hour gave it another dose. Then the child was cured. The doctor said the Balsam was good, and to continue it. The child soon began to improve, and in a few days was well and as usual.
