WOOL MEN LOOK FOR SITES

National Association's Committee Spends Day in Omaha.

PLEASED WITH WHAT THEY SEE

Satisfied Local Market Will Be Factor in Getting National-Entertained by Business Men.

"This wool market in Omaha has been worth $3,000,000 to the wool growers this year."-Fred W. Gooding, president of the Mational Wool Growers' association, Shoshoni, Idaho.

"The wool market already extablished in Omaha will prove a big lever in securing the location of the market of the national association." George S. Walker, secretary of the National Wool Growers' associstion, Cheyenne, Wyo.

Accredited representatives of the National Wool Growers' association, composing a committee selected to view probable sites and decide upon the location of the national wool market of the association (being invested with power to act) spent Thursday in Omaha and South Omaha, looking over the local field and what this field has to offer in the way of advantages. The members of the committee arrived in the morning from St. Joseph, Mo., where they inspected conditions Wednesday and left last night for Chicago on the same mission.

The committee, composed of eight large wool growers, was shown every courtesy of Martin Trauthem, who was found dead during the day, the reception committee being composed of some more prominent business men of the two cities. The visitors were met at the train and taken to the Hotel Rome, their headquarters while in the city, and then were taken in automobiles to inspect the wool warehouse, the sheep pens in the South Omaha packing center, through the large Armour packing carnival. The chief was slated over the change building. Following this they were compliment and ordered Captains Dunn given a ride over the boulevard system to at the Commercial club, where members of the local committee presented facts and figures intended to convince the vilstors that Omaha is the logical place for the location of the wool market. At 6 o'clock a banquet was served in the club rooms and the committeemen left at 10 o'clock over the Northwestern's

Overland Limited for Chicago. Fred W. Gooding, president of the National Wool Growers' association, heads the delegation, the other members being: George S. Walker, secretary of the national association; J. A. Delfelder, president of the Wyoming Wool Growers' association Wolton, Wyo.; N. S. Neilsen, Mt. Pleasant, Utah; W. Scott Anderson, Boise Idaho; Thomas Austin, Salt Lake City, Utah; J. E. Congriff, Rawlins, Wyo., and P. I. Moule, Bercall, Mont.

The first stop was made at the wool warehouse at the terminal of the Great Western tracks. They were shown through the building, large enough to hold 5,000,000 pounds of wool, with over 1,000,000 pounds now in storage. President Gooding of the national association expressed his surprise at the size of the building and stated that dozen dead divorce cases have been the building of the local market had meant

Boston Has Had Monopoly,

"Heretofore Boston has had a monopoly to trial. In most instances the plaintiff has on the wool business," said President Goodnever appeared to ask for a decree after ing. "About seven firms formed a trust filing the petitions and all of the cases dis- in the eastern city and controlled 75 per cent of the business. When this little warehouse was built those eastern fellows saw that they must do something or they would lose their grip, consequently they began boosting the price. Wool was selling for 10 cents, the price jumped to 13, 141/2. 15 and then 16 cents after this market was built and ready to receive shipments. The price of two-thirds of the output was boosted on the average of 5 cents a pound. That is what the Omaha wool market has done for the producer."

Secretary Walker then told of the experlance of a Wyoming producer. Sait Lake had offered him 12 cents for his wool, but he announced his intention of shipping to Omaha. Rather than let the shipment come here the Salt Lake firm finally raised the price to 16 cents.

The Omaha Wool Growers' association has a twenty-five-year lease on two and one-half acres of land where its warehouse situated, with 1.100 feet of track on either side. The association offers to turn this over to the national association providing the market is located in Omaha. Chicago or St. Joseph neither have local markets.

Visit in South Omaha.

From the wool warehouse the visitors were taken to South Omaha, where they were met by Evereft Buckingham, general manager of the Union Stock Yards company, and shown through the stock yards. Closer inspection was made of the sheep pens and the visitors were shown how sheep are dipped at the yards. The Armour packing plant was the only one visited, but here G. W. Bowers, assistant general manager; R. E. Harris, sales manager, and J. E. O'Hearn, superintendent, explained the operations of the big system.

Members of the committee expressed themselves as being more than favorably impressed with the conditions as they found them, but they were guarded in their remarks and said that they could not give any inkling of a decision until they had visited Chicago, the third city in the race. The committee will remain in Chicago until Thursday, when they will meet five nam school annex. representatives of the Wool Manufacturers association from the east. President Gooding said that the producers wanted to act in harmony with the manufacturers and deal direct with them, not through middle men, and the views of the representa tives from the manufacturers will be taken into consideration before any decision as to location is made. Beception Committee.

Relocation of Engine House. The South Omaha Board of Fire and Po lice Commissioners met in regular session last night. They found little to do except to urge the city council to make a needed improvement in the fire service in Brown Park by repairing the fire hall and removing it to the new site. The council has heretofore shown little disposition to act in the matter. It was decided by the city attorney that bonds could not be issued for the erection of a new fire hall without an enabling act of the legislature. So the board is now urging that the old hall be repaired and relocated so that the depart ment may be in a position to meet the ap roach of the cold season.

Permission was granted to Farmer & D'Donnell to locate a temporary wire for ecciving election returns in their hall at he back of the saloon. The board granted the petition, provided the bar of the saloon close at midnight and that the owners of the saloon provide an officer and pay for his services after midnight. The officer will see that the bar is kept closed.
