SOME FACTS ABOUT FAKES

Cases of Forgery and Fraud that Have Astonished the World.

SMOOTH RASCALS OF OTHER DAYS
 Amazing Careers of Psalmanazar, Lucas, Simonides, Bastianini, Rougemont and Other Noted Deceivers.

About 1709 Baron Kemptelen of Hungary endeavored to astonish the civilized world of Europe with his chess player. This was apparently a figure controlled by mechanical devices, and which was able, notwithstanding the fact that apparently no intelligence was concerned in its movements and decisions, generally to beat his human antagonists. The cabinet connected with the automaton appeared entirely too small to contain a hidden operator. And yet it did conceal a man who was an expert chess player. He was a Polish patriot who had lost both of his legs—perhaps in the recent war over Poland. This man, Wormsky by name, was an expert player. With his hidden in the cabinet and yet really on the spot, the rest was easy.

The career of George Psalmanazar—as he called himself—was one of the most astonishing on record. This man was born in Switzerland and of France, but during the time of his fame claimed to be a native of the Island of Formosa. He had acquired a moderate education, but seemed indisposed to employ himself in any regular occupation. Indeed, he roamed over Europe, serving the Dutch and with the German army. At one time he pretended to be an Irishman, at another an unconverted Japanese, at a third time as a converted Japanese. In the last capacity he deceived the Colonel of a British regiment at Stux. The chaplain of the regiment—a man named Innes—however, did not seem to have been deceived. He and Psalmanazar proceeded to England, and there began a marvelous career. Psalmanazar masqueraded as a genuine native of Formosa converted to Christianity.

Welcomed by the Clergy.
 The clergy received him with open arms. He had an interview with the Archbishop of Canterbury, who, however, was unable to understand his Latin. But then, who would expect a Formosan to speak Latin with perfection? He published an invented Formosan alphabet, together with forged examples of the native language, accompanying them with translations. The bishop of London seems to have believed implicitly in his claim to know the language of Formosa, for he employed Psalmanazar to translate the church catechism into it. He was sent to the University of Oxford to finish his education. There he is said to have employed his waking hours in an idle way, but to have left a candle burning while he slept to bear witness of his zeal in scholastic pursuits. He wrote a treatise upon Formosa in Latin. When this was translated into English, it had a very large success. To corroborate his claim of being a native Formosan, he would eat raw meat, roots and herbs. He was lionized, and was immensely successful. Although he carried on the deception with the greatest ingenuity, deceiving great and small, he tripped at last. In an unguarded moment he joined with someone in exploiting a "white Formosan war." This led to his downfall. Detection being imminent, he confessed. This is one account. Another has it that he became conscience-stricken, and voluntarily withdrew from the public gaze.

An Expert Forger.
 A self-educated man of humble origin of the name of Vrain Lucas, ignorant of both Greek and Latin, became the perpetrator of a fraud involving the preparation of 27,000 forged documents, many of them purporting to be letters written by celebrated historical personages. Although written in French, they purported to be letters from Sappho, Thales, Dante, Petrarch, Julius Caesar, Alexander the Great, St. Luke, Shakespeare, Lazarus, Newton, Pascal, Cleopatra and others; M. Chasles, the great mathematician, was apparently ready to believe that all the ancients were proficients in his language, for he was completely fooled by Lucas. In 1827, among other documents Lucas communicated to the Academie through Charles two letters and four notes purporting to have been written by the celebrated French mathematician and thinker, Blaise Pascal (1623-1662). If these letters had been genuine, French history would have been enriched. They would have proved him to have anticipated Newton (1642-1727) in his great discovery of the law of gravitation. Chasles was attacked, but stood his ground, even producing other letters to bear him out from Pascal to the boy Newton. The discussion lasted for two years. In 1829 the Academie made an official declaration in favor of the genuineness of the letters. France went wild. The people in the street cheered the name of Pascal. But shortly afterward an official of the Observatory pointed out that sixteen of the Pascal letters were to be found in Savonarola's "History of Modern Philosophers," which had appeared a century before. But M. Chasles claimed that Savonarola had used them without acknowledging his source. And so it went. But Le Verrier demolished the whole fabric of the fraud. Lucas was finally brought to trial, convicted and sent to prison for two years. He had realized, however, about $30,000 from his activities.

Past Master of the Art.
 Simonides was a past master in the art of literary forgery. His performances belong to approximately the same period, but were accomplished on different soil. His greatest achievement was the forgery of a history of ancient Egypt written in Greek by Uranus. This he proposed to sell to the Germans for a great sum. In order to understand just what a marvelous piece of work he produced, it will be necessary to understand some of the difficulties that he had to overcome. He had realized, however, about $30,000 from his activities.

He Had Genius.
 One of the most astonishing examples of genius devoting itself to forgery was that of the Italg Bastianini. Borne in 1370 in the midst of abject poverty, he had, properly speaking, no systematic education, either literary or artistic. But he had real genius. An antiquarian of the name of Freppa employed him for 2 francs per day to produce "antiques" which might be sold at a good profit. For this became Bastianini's livelihood—the production of forgeries. One of his most celebrated works is the bust of Savonarola. Persuaded that there was a real fifteenth century bust, two public-spirited gentlemen collected 10,000 francs and purchased it from Freppa to prevent its sale and exportation. One critic, Dupont declared that he must assign it to Michael Angelo for its force and to Robbia for the exquisite of its treatment, regarding it as a wonderful work of art. Bastianini, however, noted the English painter, having received a photograph, placed it, "like a sacred image, at the head of his bed." It is said that the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia and Lippart seriously thought of building a temple to house the wonderful work of art. But, notwithstanding the praises of those who "knew," the bust was a fake. Rumors having become current that the piece of terra cotta was not what it purported to be, one of the purchasers abruptly demanded of Bastianini one day at his workshop whether he was the creator of the bust. And he admitted that he was. But this was not the only "fake" case of Bastianini. A terra cotta bust of Benevent, a sixteenth-century poet of Florence, was regarded as a contemporary work of art, and purchased by the Louvre for 13,000 francs, and installed in a room containing work of Michelangelo himself. But it was a fake for all that.

A Staggering Tale.
 In the late twenties an English magazine was founded with the avowed object of printing true tales of adventure and the like. One day a man calling himself Louis de Rougemont handed a letter of introduction from a member of Parliament to the editor. The stranger told a harrowing tale of a life spent in Australia with cannibals in an unexplored region of that continent. Rougemont was proof against the most merciless cross-examination. He never contradicted himself. His narrative was taken down in shorthand, and published serially in the magazine. The editor introduced Rougemont to scientists, confident that the experiences of the man were of value to geographers and anthropologists. Two eminent geographers, who had heard his story, tested it from their wide and accurate knowledge, and risked their reputation by giving it full credit. They, too, were of opinion that it contained matter of especial importance to science. The British Association for the Advancement of Science began to be officially interested. Arrangements were entered into for the appearance of the hero before it at the Bristol meeting.

Rougemont told a truly staggering tale. He enriched it with lively details of a fight with an octopus, of a wreck from which he was saved by a swimming dog to whose tail he clung, of an island on which he landed and where he lived on turtle meat and rode on turtles as if they were horses, of a visit of four starving blacks, one of whom, a woman, he married and to whom he even dedicated his forthcoming narrative, and of his leaving the island to become the ruler of an Australian cannibal tribe for thirty years.

Long before the magazine had completed the story, Rougemont was found to be a faker. His biography was fiction. He had, however, deceived for a considerable time a great mass of people, many of whom were experts in the branches of knowledge having to do with the alleged facts—Scientific American.
