The last week has brought several announcements of more than passing interest, and among them two engagements and a wedding date that its definitely for the winter and spring functions that promise to be conspicuous on the social calendar. The engagement of Miss Flora Webster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Webster, and Mr. George Prinz was announced at a luncheon Thursday, and while the wedding date was not included in the announcement, it is expected to take place late in the winter. Both Mr. Prinz and his fiancée are among the best known members of the fashionable set.

The engagement of Miss Viola Cahn, daughter of Mr. Albert Cahn, and Mr. Isadore Witmark of New York City was also announced Thursday. Owing to a bereavement in her family, Miss Cahn has been withdrawn from society the last year. A daughter of one of Omaha's old families, she has hosts of friends here who will regret her departure from the city. Mr. Witmark is at the head of the well known musical publishing house of that name in New York, and will take his bride to an enviable social position in his home city.

During the week, also, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Merriam announced November 24 as the date of the wedding of their daughter, Miss Nathalie Merriam, to Mr. Barton Millard, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Millard. The wedding will take place at Trinity cathedral at 3 o'clock in the evening. The social prominence of both families will make the wedding one of the most interesting of the year. Because of ill-health, Miss Merriam has never been formally introduced. Two years ago, when just out of school, she was crowned Ak-Sar-Ben queen, and it has been a disappointment to her many friends that she has never formally entered society. She has spent much time traveling abroad and is very popular. Mr. Millard is equally popular in the younger set.

Two young hopefuls of prominent families, caused considerable worry one night last week. The parents of one small lad were at the country club for dinner and he had invited his chum to take dinner with him at his home. After dinner they decided to take a drive in the pony cart. Returning about 9 o'clock and finding the hall dark, they decided that it would be disturbing the house to ring the bell and concluded to go over to the chum's home on west Farnham hill and sleep upstairs in the barn. When the young host's parents returned from the club, the small boy's bed was empty and the other members of the family had not seen him since dinner. A search of the barn showed that the pony had been returned, so they immediately phoned to the chum's house. But no one had seen the boys there and after communicating with the police the parents of both boys spent a sleepless night. About 5 o'clock in the morning the youngsters awoke and decided to go to early mass. But one of the boys had forgotten his coat, so they sat in the choir loft, and when it was time to go to communion first one went up and then the other, wearing the coat turn about. About 6 o'clock they sauntered home and told their story—about not wishing to disturb anyone, and that they had been to church.

The popularity of the out door clubs during the last season was shown by the report of the treasurers. So stated were the directors of the Field club at the showing made on the year that they at once ordered the dance pavilion to be doubled in size to accommodate the increasing number of members who delight to dance during the summer. The dining room will also be enlarged. The summer season is almost over, the Field club having closed, although Happy Hollow, because of the more enclosed club house will keep open until October 31 when a large Halloween party will be given. The date for the closing of the Omaha Country club has not been decided.

One bride and groom of the week had more than their share of trouble. During the excitement of the ceremony and the reception the groom handed his railway tickets and baggage checks to the best man. Just after the young couple had started for the station, the best man discovered that he still had the tickets, fortunately one of the guests offered his automobile and they reached the train in time. In fact the best man got on the train first, thus being mistaken for the groom by the overly solicitous porter who locked him in the state room with the bride, while the excited groom tried to explain the situation.

At Happy Hollow.
