GREAT RISK FOR BUSINESS

certificates were not good enough for him, or else they were too good. The democratic platform of this year follows this up by demanding that, "insofar as the needs of commerce require an emergency currency such currency should be issued and controlled by the federal government."

"I regard this as a direct threat not only at the gold standard but at any sound standard. It means, if it means anything, the issue of more greenbacks. Mr. Bryan is not saying much about this plan, but he has declared that he stands on the platform as a whole. Very likely he would not seek to put this plank in operation unless some special occasion arose, but it would be just at that point that his administration would constitute the most grave menace to the safety of our monetary system and the maintenance of the public credit.

"The question is who is going to take the chances of investing gold in new business enterprises when Mr. Bryan stands ready, if he gets the chance, to send the country to a silver or a paper basis? Would the business men of this country under an administration holding such views launch out upon broad plans for building mills, factories and railroads and affording employment to idle labor? I do not think they would. I certainly should not advise the investment of trust funds or of any other funds in such enterprises until Mr. Bryan had declared very different policies from those to which he is now committed. Would foreign capital pour into the country to carry out such plans and afford the means of employing labor? I think the answer is itself. The day after the announcement of Bryan's election American securities would be thrown on the London stock market by millions of dollars and we should have to find the means of paying for them in gold.

"What would Mr. Bryan do in the face of a gold drain? His public utterances and the platforms on which he stands indicate that he would substitute silver or paper and that he would not in any case take steps to maintain the public credit and the gold standard unless he was forced to do so by public opinion. Even admitting that he took such steps ultimately, it is greatly to be feared that he would not take them soon enough to avert appalling disaster, but that we should find him seeking to lead public opinion in the wrong direction, holding on his old tune while Rome was burning.

"For my part I am resolutely opposed to the election of any president, whose election will invite doubt and hesitation in business circles and who is committed to the renewal of the greenback folly of a generation ago. To admit him and his party to power would be like the admission of the wooden horse to the walls of Troy. Out of it would come a swarm of enemies of business confidence and the public credit which would set the country back a decade, if not a generation, in its economic progress. To my mind the pres-

SPIRIT OF THE NEW JAPAN

Demonstration in Honor of Americans Surpasses Anything in Tokio.

TORCHLIGHT PARADE MILES LONG

Day of Elaborate Entertainment for Officers is Closed with Dinner Given by Baron Komura.

TOKIO, Oct. 22.—The capital of Japan witnessed tonight the most extraordinary evidence of the spirit of the new Japan. After having an audience of all the officers of the American battleship fleet on Tuesday the emperor issued an order directing the people to increase in every way possible the enjoyment, comfort and pleasure of the American visitors who came here, said, as historic friends of the Japanese nation. The response to this imperial mandate was seen and heard tonight, originally a torchlight procession of 15,000 people was planned as part of today's program, but this feature went far beyond expectations and developed one of the greatest popular demonstrations and outpourings of an enthusiastic people ever witnessed in any country. Japan's celebration after peace with Russia, London's Marking night and even New York's election night reveal would seem almost insignificant when compared with Tokio's celebration tonight. It would be impossible to number the people who took part in the parade and the myriad of spectators. Mile after mile through madly cheering people the great procession wound its way. Representatives of various clubs, universities, schools of every class for boys and other organizations took part in the parade, each individual carrying a lighted lantern. The parade was held high on a pole with American and Japanese flags intertwined. Admiral Sperry and the other officers of the American fleet viewed the procession from a special stand, standing with bowed heads above the sea of waving lanterns. As the parade moved on the American officers stood, that the entire procession was blocked until Admiral Sperry was forced to leave in order to keep an engagement at the dinner given by Minister of Foreign Affairs Komura.

Again at the American embassy the great procession halted and the clamor was reached, although Ambassador O'Brien was not at the embassy at the time. He, too, had left to attend the function at the residence of his foreign minister. When the head of the procession arrived at the embassy and halted, Mrs. O'Brien and other ladies of the embassy appeared on the veranda and had a prolonged ovation from the crowds, every man and boy in the parade lifting his hat to the ladies, while there were continuous shouts for the American ambassador. The entire grounds surrounding the embassy were lighted with great care, will investigate the banking business of the world and all the information its members secure will be used for the benefit of the American depositors.

The fact that the republican party stands pledged to the postal savings bank has been a stumbling block in the way of the democratic party's banking proposals. The information thus obtained will be reported back to congress together with recommendations looking to legislation along safe and sane lines.

The fact that the republican party stands pledged to the postal savings bank has been a stumbling block in the way of the democratic party's banking proposals. The information thus obtained will be reported back to congress together with recommendations looking to legislation along safe and sane lines.

During the last few days many calls have come into the democrats for some details of Mr. Bryan's plan to guarantee bank deposits; many have inquired how much of a fund will be set aside for the guarantee into the low which will the interest rates be increased in order to create this fund? One foreigner asked if a bank with a capital of $50,000 failed, and it deposits of several millions, would the assessment that would have to be levied on the other banks not seriously embarrass about origin them?

These and many more embarrassing questions are being asked the democrats, and so far as heard from not one of them has been satisfactorily answered. The democratic committee and the democratic speakers drew the line at going into details about the scheme they propose.

This has aroused the suspicion of the very people the democrats hoped to stampede, and the last few days of the campaign democrats will devote to sidestepping the questions that have arisen and to a misrepresentation of republican candidates and principles.

Campaign in the State. Senator Aldrich of Butler county was in Lincoln today, having been at Kearney last night, where he spoke to an enthusiastic crowd.

JOURNAL INCLINED TO BALANCE

Journal will bear out, while that she was jabbing Senator Burckett. It had the effect of the family along, as did Mr. Jones. Mr. Burckett figured it would. The job is sufficiently remunerative to pay the expenses of a trip to Annapolis and have a little left over, besides taking a member of the family along, as did Mr. Jones.

Democrats are Treating. Mr. Bryan's campaign committee, headed by Tom Allen, brother-in-law of the democratic candidate, is devoting the last days of the campaign to double-crossing every other candidate on the democratic ticket and using every possible influence to help out the Bryan vote.

Mr. Shallenberger personally knows this, as he was told when he demanded support of Tom Allen that he would have to hustle for himself. Shallenberger then prevailed upon Chris Gruenther, in addition to his other duties, to at least look after his speaking tour, so during the last few days of Shallenberger to devote his entire time to Shallenberger and Tom Allen and the rest of the committee is out for Bryan and Bryan only.

So anxious is Allen to carry the state for Bryan that his henchmen will stop at nothing to accomplish their purpose. Frank Brown, a son of Mayor Brown, who probably next to Mayor Dahlman is Bryan's closest advisor in this state, offered to trade his Shallenberger vote for a vote for Bryan. He offered to make the trade with an appointee of Governor Sheldon. That shows just how much faith Bryan's followers have in the ability of Shallenberger to be elected and how much they care. It is believed no republicans will be fooled by such propositions from democrats.

Appeal to Foreign Born. The democratic state committee is making a fearful appeal to the foreign born voters to stand by Mr. Bryan because he is the only one who will protect their interests by a levy upon the banks, and the response to the appeal is very unsatisfactory to the committee.

The fact that a republican congress has appointed a commission to visit the various countries of Europe and make a thorough investigation into the banking institutions of those countries is known to all voters. The information thus obtained will be reported back to congress together with recommendations looking to legislation along safe and sane lines.

In Indiana, John W. Kern will head the list of speakers on the "National Special," while Thomas H. Marshall, democratic gubernatorial candidate, will head the speaking force of the "Indiana Special." They will alternate throughout the week with the speakers assigned to Indiana specials.

It is stated that the use of the four special trains will enable the speakers to reach practically every voter in the two states.

MACK TAKES CHEERFUL VIEW Says Mr. Bryan Will Answer President's Labor Letter.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Speaking of the letter of President Roosevelt demanding that Mr. Bryan declare himself on the labor questions of the day, National Chairman Mack said today that if there was any laboring man in doubt about voting for Bryan, the reading of the president's letter would convince him that he should cast his vote for the democratic ticket. Mr. Bryan will answer the president's letter, said Mr. Mack, who added that the Denver convention had done what the labor party had asked and that Mr. Bryan was standing on the platform drafted by that convention.

Mr. Mack said he had received reports from Ohio that the reception tendered Mr. Bryan in the Buckeye state yesterday was the greatest demonstration ever given to a presidential candidate in any campaign.
