Trouble With Telephones—Guests at the Her Grand hotel were awakened a few evenings ago by every telephone in the house ringing simultaneously—all the rooms were furnished with telephones. The result was that the sleeping guests didn't know whether it was a fire or a riot alarm. The trouble was soon discovered to be a temporary disarrangement of the automatic exchange and the trouble was finally remedied by cutting off the connection and peace was secured.

Granger of Atchison, Kan., is in Omaha looking up witnesses to appear before the United States circuit court at Topeka in some railroad rate cases. Conway and dozen aldermen and city officials of Shenandoah, Ia., spent Thursday in Omaha. They are enroute to Minneapolis to investigate the merits of crocoets block paving. The party probably will come back enthusiastic over that kind of paving, for they are making the trip in charge of an official of the company which makes the blocks, and he is doing the usual thing in the way of entertainment and little matters like buying tickets, sleeping car tickets and that sort of thing. The visitors took luncheon at the Henshaw while in the city.

Chenault a Former Nebraska—James Chenault, the young colored man killed at South Omaha Thursday night, is thought to be a former Nebraskan. A young man of his age and description accompanied the First Nebraska regiment to the Philippines in 1898 and returned with the regiment to this state. He was company cook for Company C of Beatrice. Upon his return with the regiment to San Francisco Chenault posed as a captured Filipino and the members of Company C had him dressed as a ferocious Iroquois and exhibited him as such at San Francisco. The trick took immensely and the boys reaped quite a harvest of coin from it.

Tom O'Brien Bound Over—Thomas O'Brien, an alleged counterfeiter and recently rearrested at Fremont under a warrant issued by United States Commissioner Markey at Lincoln, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Anderson Friday afternoon and bound over to the federal grand jury in $1,000. He was ordered taken to the Lancaster county jail at Lincoln. O'Brien is charged with passing one of the Farmers' and Planters' Georgia bank notes which he had deftly pasted together. The offense is alleged to have been committed at Geneva, Neb., and O'Brien will be tried for the offense in the Lincoln federal district instead of Omaha.

Optim Fiends Are Fined—On the charge of keeping an opium joint A. L. Kennedy, colored, was fined $35 and costs in police court Friday morning and George Dewey, the white man, was arrested with Kennedy as an inmate of the house, forfeited his cash bond of $10 for nonappearance. Judge Crawford ruled that although Patrolmen Murphy and Augie did not see either of the men smoking the "hop" they were guilty of the charges preferred under the circumstantial evidence. The room at 413 North Twentieth street where the men were found by the officers Thursday night was filled with opium smoke and a complete outfit for the consumption of the drug was found in such condition that it was thought that use had just been made of it before the raid was made.

Pullman Porter Goes Free—Because it could not be definitely determined whether H. J. Johnson, a Pullman porter assaulted St. L. Sanders of Chicago on the Nebraska or the Iowa side of the Union Pacific railroad bridge as a Burlington train was pulling into Omaha Thursday morning, Johnson was discharged by Judge Crawford in police court Friday morning. The porter admitted assaulting Sanders, but claimed he did so in order to prevent the latter from doing so to him. When the point of jurisdiction was raised, Prosecutor Daniel was unable to secure a conviction, as no competent evidence was introduced on the question of what state the assault occurred in.

Distinctive styles for Discriminating Dressers

One of our particular hobbies is to satisfy the "flicky" dresser—the man who doesn't buy until he has examined every detail and proven that he's getting full value in material, style, workmanship and fit. Possibly it's easier for us than most people because our clothes are all made so nearly perfect. You can be sure you are wearing the correct New York styles, and the newest colors and fabrics, if your clothes are from this store. The tailoring is another part on which we place great stress; only the very best is accepted by us. Examine these garments point by point—the material, the stylish lines, the "lay" of the collar, the careful stitching, the excellent lining and you'll echo our statement that our clothing is worth more and yet sells for less than any clothing ever offered in comparison. The man who doesn't know exactly what he wants can put in a very pleasant quarter-hour at this store finding it, and the exact size that best fits him.

Laura K. Porter, Colored, Kills J. W. Chenault, with Whom She Lived.

ADMITTS STRIKING THE BLOWS

Says Man Came at Her with Knife, but Police and Circumstances Appear to Discredit Her Story of Affair.

The murder of J. W. Chenault about 2 p. m. Thursday at his home, 208 North Twenty-sixth street, by his paramour and housekeeper, Laura K. Porter, colored, was unusually brutal. J. F. Marvel, a constable of the city, went to the house at 2:20 p. m. to serve an attachment on the household goods of Chenault, or Jack Dempsey, as he is better known. After rapping at the front door and getting no response he went to the rear and knocked, then looked through the window, where he saw Chenault lying on the floor in a wattle of blood. He gave warning to the police at once and then entered the house, which was locked securely at both doors. There he found a new hatchet and a pocket-knife on the floor near the man, who was feebly struggling with six wounds on his head and face. The wounds were made by the hatchet, which was of a heavy kind. The crime was committed in the kitchen, where there was a small couch. It was evident that he was on the couch at the time of the assault, for the whole couch was saturated with blood. From it he rolled on the floor.

Dr. Sapp was called and ordered the man taken to the South Omaha hospital, where he died in about half an hour. It is probable that the inquest will be held this afternoon. All the details of the case were cleared up with the arrest of Laura K. Porter by the Omaha police at the home of her sister, Mrs. Gray, at 1211 Davenport street. The woman makes unique plea.

was brought to South Omaha by Captain J. C. Trouton, where she confessed that she alone committed the crime. She intended to kill him. "I intended to do it when I struck him first. But he was coming at me with the knife. I grabbed the hatchet and hit him on the side of the head. He fell on the couch. Then I kept on hitting him with the blade of the hatchet and I don't know how many times I hit him. He rolled off the couch on the floor. I thought I had killed him, and I left him for dead. The knife was open on the floor and shows for itself. No, I did not hit him in his sleep. After he was still, I dressed and locked up the house and went to Omaha, where my sister lives and told her I had had some trouble and thought I had killed Chenault." The direction of the wound on the side of the head indicates it probably was inflicted while he was lying down, for it slants up and forward from the back of the ear. If he had been facing her, as she said, and she had struck him, the wound on the side of the head would more likely have slanted forward and down for he is much taller than the woman. If he were lying on the couch facing the wall the wound could have delivered the blow in the exact manner in which the wound was made. It is the firm belief of the police that she did strike Chenault in his sleep, for the man was wearing his slippers, and the couch was covered with blood. Then the fact that she kept on striking the man would not indicate the police say, a sudden assault on his part. For it is thought in that case she would have delivered perhaps one blow and ran out to give the alarm. Instead, she changed her clothes carefully, took her suitcase, and locked up the doors. The police, therefore, take no stock in the woman's plea of self-defense. The open knife was looked upon as an afterthought on her part. She has not a scratch.

In making her confession the woman exhibited perfect composure. Chenault kept a pool hall on N street, near Twenty-sixth. He has been living with the woman for some time. Recently they have been quarreling. In the woman's effects was found a letter from Charles Williams of Kansas City, dated November 5, professing the deepest love for the woman and begging her to come to him. He offered to send her a ticket to Kansas City if she would come to him. From about this time trouble was frequent between Chenault and the woman. The police have the confession reduced to writing and signed by the woman.
