

Stomach Gases and Torpid Livers

Give Way Before the Peculiar Purifying Power of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

A Trial Package Sent Free.

The foul gases of the stomach and the torpid action of the liver are easy victims for charcoal to overcome.

This great natural cleanser and absorbent will most certainly be relied upon by a system afflicted with gaseous or sluggish tendencies.

Charcoal has long been known as a great absorbent of gas. A painful of charcoal will positively purify a room filled with foul odors and decay. Its absorbing ratio is one hundred times greater than its own volume.

The ancients gave charcoal for many human ills successfully. The North American Indians used it for snake bite, poison from eating wild herbs and cured what they called "stomach bad medicine" with it.

Willow charcoal seems to be the best product for human use, and no doubt the peculiar curative property of the willow is represented in a chemical quality in its charcoal.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are pure willow and sweet honey blended by tremendous power and compressed into a very palatable lozenge. Two or three lozenges eaten after meals will prevent the process of digestion from producing noxious gases. They will give a laxative and aid every organ which is most likely to be overcome through its contact with impurities.

They cleanse the stomach and intestines, bring purity and sweetness out of fermentation and decay and aid digestion by allaying gas. They will aid you and your stomach. The beneficial effects are made evident after each meal when you use charcoal as Stuart prepares it. To allay gas at night they are excellent and one arises in the morning without that terrible nauseating bad breath which destroys appetite and renders one miserable.

All druggists sell Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, price twenty-five cents, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free.

STAG SOCIAL PROVES WINNER

Knight of the Mystic Circle Presents an Interesting Program.

A wrestling bout between James Murphy, Omaha patrolman, and John Eminger of Sioux Falls, lightweight champion of South Dakota, was the feature of a stag social given by the Knights of the Mystic Circle in their hall at Nineteenth and Farnam streets last night. Eminger won two of the three falls, his opponent declaring he had enough in the last bout, which lasted seven minutes. The first bout was six minutes long and in the second Murphy threw Eminger in two minutes.

W. R. Huntington astonished everyone with his feats of legerdemain, using playing cards for his entertainment. Mr. Huntington did not simply give the old sleight of hand tricks which have been seen for years, but he brought out some new ones, startling in their mystery. Other entertainment consisted of vocal and instrumental selections by Henry Hanzauer and a violin solo by George Rohn. At the close of the entertainment refreshments were served.

The stag social last night was the first of the Knights of the Mystic Circle having during the winter months. The lodge room was well filled.

FINALE OF DR. LEE'S LECTURES

Believes World is Growing Better All the Time and Will Continue to Do So.

Despite the inclement weather there was a fair-sized audience at the Young Men's Christian association last night to hear the third and last of the tripartite lecture course which has been delivered in the city by Dr. Guy Carleton Lee.

The subject last night was "A Nation Triumphant," and came as a fitting sequel to the two others, "When the People Wake" and "The Strength of the People." Dr. Lee believes not only that the world is growing better, but that it is better now than it has ever been. He holds that humanity, with America in the lead, is entering on a future so glorious that all previous progress will be completely obliterated.

The lecture last night closed Dr. Lee's present engagement in Omaha.

BLAMES THE CREW FOR WRECK

J. George Young Says Freight Men Were Responsible.

TRAIN STAYED ON THE MAIN LINE

H. R. Ringwalt, Who Was on Passenger and Freight, Gives Account of the Accident as He Felt It.

"The Thurston wreck on the Omaha railroad Friday evening, in which one man was killed and a number injured, was entirely due to the negligence of the crew of the freight train, according to my opinion and information on the matter."

This statement was made Saturday morning by J. George Young, of the National Investment company of this city, who was the passenger train that collided with the freight and who went to the engine with a St. Paul man after the smashup, saw the whole situation and assisted the injured engineer and others.

"From what I saw, I think the fireman, who had sole control of the freight, while other members of the crew were in Thurston for supper, had proceeded north on the main line past the siding, instead of running in on the siding, as he was supposed to do. I think he did this in order to save a brakeman in the caboose the trouble of walking the whole length of the train to throw the switch and let the string of cars onto the siding. The train was supposed to enter the siding at the south end, but from the way the switches at both ends were set, failed to do so. The freight train, and yet at the head of the main line was entirely open for the freight to enter the siding at a signal that the freight was on the siding."

According to a statement made by Engineer James McQuinn of the passenger train when Mr. Young and other men helped him down from the top of the tender, where he had been thrown by the force of the impact, the last words of fireman George A. Stauffer, who was instantly killed, were:

"They're on the main line."

Headlight Is Blinded.

It is thought that the wreck would never have occurred if the headlight of the freight had not been blinded.

The story of the freight crew is to the effect that its train had been run through the siding and out again onto the main line because the slippery rails made the brakes useless. However, the statements of Mr. Young and other men who saw the situation immediately after the head-on collision and took pains to ascertain the cause of the wreck, the rails of the siding had not been passed over by a train before the accident, both switches to the siding were set for the main line train so that it could pass without entering the siding, and the end of the freight train had not yet reached the north switch which, it is thought, the rear brakeman intended to throw and let his train in at the wrong end by backing in, thus saving himself a walk.

Conductor George C. Young of the passenger was not injured, early reports saying that he had been badly bruised having arisen only through the hysterical condition of his wife who was on the train and had been found by her husband.

R. R. Ringwalt, western agent of the Empire line, Pennsylvania railroad, who was on the passenger coming to Omaha, was thrown violently from his seat and his right eye barely escape being destroyed by having the lenses of his spectacles break. As it was Mr. Ringwalt will wear a bandage over the eye for some time, but he will not lose the sight of the eye, the broken crystal not entering the eyeball.

"We were just entering the Thurston yards," said Mr. Ringwalt, "when suddenly the airbrakes were set and almost immediately afterward everybody in the coach and every loose article, suit case and grip were thrown toward the front end in confusion. Many persons were injured slightly like myself and a few seriously. The brakeman, who was just opening his mouth to announce the next stop, was thrown against the door and had his head and shoulders forced through the heavy plate glass.

"For some time there was great confusion and dire imaginings of what deaths might have resulted, but when the facts became known, it was remarked on all sides that a wonderful escape from a much more terrible catastrophe had been our lot. If the engineer of the passenger had not set his brakes when he did, the loss of life and damage to property would have been frightful."

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Swift and Company Perfecting Plans for a Car and Machine Shop.

SEWER WORKERS HANDICAPPED

Autopsy Held on J. W. Chenault and Coroner Will Conduct the Inquest, Commencing This Forenoon.

Swift and company are perfecting plans for permanent car and machine shops which are to be erected at the south end of the beef house. The plans include capacity enough for the present needs and are also designed to meet growth in the business of repair.

Heretofore only light repair work has been done in South Omaha and this has all done on the open tracks. It has been impossible to do much in the winter time. The new shops will have all necessary equipment to do the heavy repair work and even to construct new cars. Here also will be the place for all repair work outside the plant, the construction of trucks, co-ops, and box factory.

As the need for this kind of work increases with the business of the plant the shops will be enlarged.

Some work remains to be done on the south story and the roof of the new beer house; but this work has been advancing at a rapid rate. The cold weather will put a check on all cement work, which will not bear freezing temperatures. The company hopes to get the building enclosed before frost sets in, and then the work may be completed this season.

Trouble With Sewer Work.

The National Construction company still has much difficulty with the Mud creek sewer. The company has been trying for about two months to get the working shield under cover at the east end of the tunnel section. The work is impeded for the reason that as soon as the clay where the sewer bed lies is mined there is a heavy weight of sand just above which caves in front of the shield. The entire hillside has caved repeatedly until the sand wall is fifty feet high ready to go down with the first working of the clay below. A few days ago a large mass fell on the head of the shield, or the hood, and flattened it out somewhat. It was necessary to straighten this out before the work could advance. The point of the shield is now about two feet from cover and if it can be moved forward twenty feet more it is thought the difficulty will be passed.

Good, hard freeze would help this work for it would stiffen up the sandy wall and stop some of the caving. The history of this sewer construction so far has been one of difficulty and great discouragement on all sides.

Chenault Inquest Today.

The inquest over the body of J. W. Chenault was held in South Omaha at 10 a. m. today. The autopsy was performed last night by Dr. Lavender, the coroner's physician. The deepest wound was found in the parietal section of the left lobe of the brain, a point just above the left ear. There were also injuries to the anterior lobes or the frontal section. There was a second cut under the left ear which would have been equally fatal for it penetrated the brain. There were no cuts or marks on the man's body. Two cuts side by side and parallel would indicate more than ever that the man was struck in his sleep.

He partially recovered consciousness at one time and told Dr. C. E. Sapp he did not know who had struck him. If this can be well established the case will be doubly hard for the woman.

The officers found a large package of letters which Laura K. Potter had received. Many of them will be of a most damaging nature, showing the familiar relations she has had with a half dozen different men.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Business men's hand ball is the popular game in the gymnasium during the noon hour. Every noon sees a bunch of the men in.

The week of prayer was well observed save Thursday evening. The weather was disagreeable to face. However, Rev. R. W. Livers, the leader, was promptly on time and ready to do his part.

The "Pop" that Dr. Mick of Omaha was to have put on has been postponed until Saturday evening, November 21. The doctor will illustrate x-ray and electrical methods as used by the medical profession today.

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock is the closing meeting of the week of prayer service. The meeting will be held in the gymnasium and for men only. The morning services at all the churches will be in accord with the subject, "The Spirit of Prayer."

The desk for the safe keeping of valuables is now in place. Members and their friends can now leave valuables and receive checks for them, thus securing a more enjoyable hour than if watching or caring for things of importance.

Night school for foreigners opens next Tuesday evening. A large class of Greeks has signified its intention of joining at that time. This class will furnish instruction in speaking, reading and writing the English language. The educational department, under the supervision of Chairman Shaffer and the instruction of Prof. Johnson, is doing good work. Many men are securing an education through this department who otherwise would have to go without.

Baby Was Disappointed.

Street car conductor No. 11, whatever line that is, has the best story yet on the recent baby show at the Auditorium. He runs between Omaha and South Omaha, and on one of his trips he stopped on the Auditorium corner to take on passengers. Among them was a woman with a baby in her arms.

The baby was crying bitterly and the mother was sobbing. "Oh, air," she said, "can't you take me home, I've just got to go, and my money's all gone. Oh, dear! There are 3,000 women in there and they are all crazy. See what they have done. They pulled me all around and knocked me down. They hurt my baby and they hurt me. Somebody got my pocketbook with all my money. The baby didn't get no prize and it's the best one there. I know it is. Now, if you can take me home I will come out and pay you on your next trip. Why, I'm glad to get out with my baby alive. If they hadn't knocked me down and made my cry I'd have got that prize."

The conductor took her in and before the home street was reached the baby stopped crying and brightened up. The mother looked almost consoled.

"That was a pretty baby," said the conductor as he watched the woman moving rapidly as the car went on. "They tell me there is no place so full of disappointment as a baby show."

GOOD STORY WORKS HEAFEY

Grows Suspicious Later On and Finally Recovers His Check.

"My child has just died and I want you to look after the funeral," said John Sullivan to P. C. Heafey, the newly elected coroner last night. Sullivan, who is described at the police station as being a "low tramp," gave the details of the death of his child and seemed to be so affected by his loss that he turned all the direction of the burial to the undertaker.

Incidentally he mentioned that he was out of money and that a few dollars to help him meet incidental expenses would come in handy. Now Heafey has recently passed through the ordeal of a political campaign and is faced to sudden and imperative calls upon his purse-strings. In the fullness of his heart he sat down and wrote the fellow a check for $5. The man took the check and departed gratefully. Heafey busied himself selecting an appropriate casket and burial robes, but suddenly he bethought himself. Suppose the fellow was a fraud.

He called up several families in the locality which the man had given as his home, but none of them had heard of such a case. Then Heafey grew wise.

In the meantime Sullivan had tried at several places to get the check cashed,
