FESLER LISTS 62 VARIOUS ST. LOUIS ORGANIZATIONS

"Ready Reference" information for Use in City Improvement Movements.

Mayo Fesler, secretary of the City League, has prepared and mailed to every member of the 62 commercial, civic and professional associations, a list of each organization, with its address, giving the names of its officers, and their addresses, for the purpose of making it possible for the various organizations to cooperate in city improvement movements. The list ranges from 4000 in Trades and Labor Union to 14 firms in the St. Louis Electrical Contractors' Association.

A few of the larger associations are: Central Trades and Labor Union, 4000; Building Trades Council, 19; League of Retail Grocers Association, 126; North St. Louis Business Men's Association, 500; Business Men's Association, 600; and Building Industry Association, 500.

Large Crowds Attend.

The Ferguson-McKinney Million Dollar Dry Goods Sale drew large crowds. Among the many buyers present were noticed several from Hayden Bros. of Omaha, Neb., one of the largest wholesale and retail concerns west of Chicago.

FOOD FOR A YEAR

Meats... 300 lbs.

Milk... 240 lbs.

Butter... 100 lbs.

Eggs... 27 doz.

Vegetables... 50 lbs.

This represents a fair ration for a man for one year. But some people eat and eat and yet grow thinner. This means a defective digestion and unsuitable food. A one-dollar bottle of Scott's Emulsion equals in nourishing properties ten pounds of meat. Your physician can tell you how it does it.

Books and Magazines

In "The Story of the New England Whalers," by John R. Spears, romance has clustered around the occupation of the Yankee whalers wherever their exploits have been known, but no one who has not studied the subject would guess the amount of incident and adventure there is in their story. Mr. Spears, who is an authority on the American navy, must have dug deep into the records to find all the curious anecdotes that he presents. He shows that whaling began almost with the first settlement of the Atlantic coast, that the early whalers learned their trade from the Indians, whom they afterward employed extensively to assist them; that whaling as an industry supported practically every inhabitant of the island of Nantucket for years. There are thrilling tales in plenty of dangerous chases, of savage whales which have wrecked boats and even sunk ships, and of whole fleets caught in the ice of northern seas and held for months. Mr. Spears extols the old-time whalers as the bravest and most independent of Americans, and his admiration for them is abundantly justified by the stories he tells. Published by the Macmillan company.

"The new book of Austin Dobson, 'De Libris,' is a most interesting volume. It is mostly concerned with bookish affairs, as the title indicates. But Mr. Dobson's books represent a wide range of interest, and such matters are discussed here as a French Critic of Bath, the Parent's Assistant, Certain Modern Book Illustrations and other topics, the essence of which extend beyond library walls. Furthermore, these little essays are interspersed with some of Mr. Dobson's most characteristic verse. In the best, in which Mr. Dobson is at his best, he is easily first among living poets, and he has many devoted admirers who will welcome these charming and whimsical poems, as well as the stimulating thought and genial style of his prose. The Macmillan company is the publisher.

"Vronia," by Owen Vaughan (Owen Rhoadson), author of "Old Fireproof," "Sweet Rogues," etc., is a story of Welsh life. It is a vigorous romance, with its scenes all laid in Wales. The author himself is a Welshman, which will make the atmosphere realistic and the vigorous and healthy atmosphere more enjoyable. Dodd, Mead & Co. is the publisher.

"Dorothy Dainty's Gay Times" is the seventh volume of the "Dorothy Dainty Series," by Amy Brooks. Dorothy is at her beautiful home in the "great stone house," and with her mates is enjoying more than ever the little home school so carefully conducted by "Aunt Charlotte," as they all gain in knowledge. Some new pupils, among them a little, and a real boy, too, if he does go to school with girls, gives variety. The favorite "Nancy" is prominent in this story as well as in the others, and has a very interesting experience. Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company is the publisher.

"King Time, or the Mystical Land of the Hours," by Percival F. Fugh, is the leading juvenile on the list of H. M. Caldwell company of New York and Boston this fall. "Where the lost hours go" is the theme of the book. The little hero visits the mystical kingdom of Father Time. He meets King Time, immensities that he prescribes the various hours of history, the old duke of "Procrastination," who is waging war against King Time, and becomes involved in the military preparations, which are never completed. Different emps, each representing some great event in the world's history, tell the stories of what they saw during their life in the world, to the amusement, instruction and astonishment of the hero. The houses in which the emps live are in the shape of clocks—alarm clocks, Swiss clocks, cuckoo clocks, etc. The story is told partly in prose and partly in verse. Illustrated by J. L. Bridgman.

John Graham Brooks, widely known as the author of "The Social Unrest," one of the most through-provoking discussions of modern social conditions, has written a new book, which promises to be no less important and interesting. "As Others See Us" is the title of this book, in which Mr.

Brooks has brought together for comparison and test the opinions of America expressed by the most famous critics who have visited us since we became a nation. In the light of these opinions Mr. Brooks discusses many topics of interest to every American. The placing of these critics side by side promises a great deal of amusement, but it should also furnish valuable material for a serious estimate of what America is in the eyes of the rest of the world. Published by the Macmillan company.

"All Among the Loggers, or Norman Carver's Winter in a Lumber Camp," by C. B. Burleigh, author of the "Raymond Benson" series, is the first volume of the "Norman Carver Series." Norman Carver is a bright, vigorous youth whose father feels that a winter of practical affairs will be better for his son than getting into scrapes at school, where, his social position and active nature make other things easier than hard old-fashioned study. So he is sent to the deep woods of Maine, where his father owns lumbering interests, and set to work as company's "clerk." An eventful winter follows which does much for him. Besides being a first-class story, this book contains more genuine information about the growth and cutting of timber and the picturesque life of the loggers than has ever before been put in readable form. Mr. Burleigh is himself largely interested in lumbering operations and knows what he is writing about. Published by Lothrop, Lee & Shepard company.

"Jack the Young Explorer," by George Bird Grinnell, author of "Jack the Young Ranchman," "Jack Among the Indians," "Jack in the Rockies," etc., takes Jack into regions of great interest in northern Montana, which, strange to say, have remained until recent years almost unknown to man. This district a bill now in the senate advocates preserving in its natural state. Jack, his guide Hugh and an Indian boy climb the mountains, see the ice fields and glaciers, and learn much about the animals and birds, and the geological nature of the country. They encounter chieftains and Indians, hostile and friendly, and find much big game. Published by the Frederick A. Stokes company.

A new "Queen Silverbell" fairy story by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett is entitled "The Spring Cleaning." It is the story of the dear little daughter of an English vicarage, and of the "Primrose World," and Queen Silverbell, of course, puts her finger deep into the pie. It is illustrated with gray-colored pictures by Harrison Cady. Published by the Century company.

Smith's for November appears on the newsstands with a bigger, better and more varied assortment of good things. Emma Lee Walton's complete novel, "The Uses of Adversity," is a splendid study of Chicago life. "The First Operatic War," by Rupert Hughes, is a short history of one period in the growth and development of grand opera that no music lover can afford to miss. Those interested in houses, or who think of building or buying, should read "Charles de Kay's article, 'The All-Concrete Dwelling.' Annette Austin's paper, 'Shall the Girl Go to College?' should be read by every mother with a grown-up daughter. Florence Augustine contributes an interesting article on new ideas in hair dressing and the art of choosing a becoming hat that should interest every woman. The short stories in this number are far above the average and are contributed by such writers as W. B. M. Ferguson, Anne O'Hagan, Francis Metcalf, Holman F. Day, Alice E. Allen, Lola Scott and Dorothy Canfield. Beside this there is some delightful verse, humorous by Wallace Irwin and serious by Elizabeth Frazer and Arthur Guiterman. The magazine opens with a section of heavy calendared paper containing sixteen well printed photographic art studies of prominent actresses.

"Wilderness Homes," by Oliver Kemp, is a practical book on log cabins. It will be of great interest to anyone planning a home in the woods. It tells how the amateur can build his own summer home at the lowest cost and how to go about it. Numerous plans and valuable specifications are given. The Outing Publishing company is the publisher.

SUBTLETIES OF ADULTERATION

Scientific Research Reveals Bypasses for Makers of Doped Food.

Since Solomon and his forebears declared divers weights and divers measures, the abomination, the fraud has grown, and especially the sophistication of weights and measures by the crafty use of adulterants, was uncontrolled until about the year 1875. In Science of November 6 Mr. A. L. Winton, government chemist at Chicago, essays to point out the reasons for this lack of control.

In the first place, the complexities of demand and of invention in producing commercial articles that can be successfully imitated have increased, and are still increasing. Food, drugs, paints, oils, chemicals and fabrics have thus become debased. The primitive manufacture at home of butter, lard and cheese, starch, yarn and cloths has been supplanted by mills and factories; this reduced the cost and spared the housewife, but deprived her of a first-hand knowledge of the genuineness of such products. Then, too, adulterants have multiplied, many of them being of the highest scientific research. Solomon would today be fairly afflicted at the long list of abominations in oils, acids, dyes, preservatives, and kinds of habit-forming drugs employed in modern refinements of cheating in goods.

Before it was curbed, and because of its subtleties of invasion, the evil of adulterants acquired monstrous proportions. The Connecticut experiment station was established in 1875 for official inspection and analytical control of foodstuffs. Since then the cities of the nation and all the civilized nations have built up an imperfect agency of defense against the fraud of adulteration. The old scriptural rage is at last intelligently directed against the sin in its new guises. Before long it will be as generally condemned and punished as is the infraction of the commandment against stealing.—New York Times.
