ELECTION NIGHT IN HAVANA

Natives Pull Off a Celebration Very Much on the American Plan.

Havana, Nov. 28.—"Watching and waiting for and celebrating the result of the Cuban election, held November 23, is thus described by La Lucha, the leading newspaper of Havana: "The Americans who watched some of the things occurring last night must have recalled election times at home, for the street cars which traversed the city loaded to the gunwales with enthusiastic liberals, banners and music, evoked many smiles of approbation and encouragement. The sentiment, 'Go it, boys; may the best man win,' was in the hearts of all the Americans who witnessed the plentiful display of enthusiasm. Many were the cars which were loaded, and the cheers and shouting heralded their approach when they were several blocks distant. On some of these cars persons were perched on the roofs, so anxious were they to climb into what they considered the band wagon."
