WAR ON THE STREET RAILWAY

Younkerman Bound to Stop Switching of Cars.

Councilman Oscar Younkerman yesterday announced his determination to go after the street railway company hot footed next Tuesday. That is unless the company goes back to the order of the council to desist from switching its big cars at the intersection of Broadway and Pearl street.

According to Councilman Younkerman, Major George H. Richmond and the entire police department is to be lined up in battle array if necessary Tuesday to prevent the switching of the big cars at this point.

The actual hour at which the militant force of the municipality will swoop down upon the offending cars and their crews has not yet been determined. Neither has it been determined whether the batons of blue coats will be led by Major Richmond in person or by that doughty warrior, Sergeant Jack O'Neil. It is said that the members of the police force are bunching up their fighting impedimenta in anticipation of the fray Tuesday. It is possible that Councilman Younkerman may lead the invading force in person.

Asked yesterday if he intended having the officials of the company or the conductors and conductresses arrested, Mr. Younkerman said, "I don't know as to that. It seems to me that will be a question for the city attorney and the chief of police to decide. If switching has to be stopped, I do not think it will be necessary to call out the Dodge Light Guards and I am not sure that could if we wanted to."

Following the earliest of the pioneer days in time succeeded the missionaries. One of the earliest of these was Father DeSmet, a Jesuit priest, who established himself in Iowa as early as 1838. Among his achievements as recorded was the conversion of Sacagawea, a young woman and the teaching of the French language to the famous Sioux chief.

Another who followed was Robert Gaylord, educated at Andover, who came to the "Great American Desert" as a young man as a missionary. He came to Iowa in 1841 and to Omaha in 1845, being the second Congregational minister in Iowa and the first in Nebraska. To his suggestion is due the establishment of Grinnell College, Iowa.

Another who followed was George W. Nichols, who came to Council Bluffs, 1908.

John A. H. Stoddard to Council Bluffs, 1908.
