With reference to the Bureau of Corporawould support Mr. Cannon. This number has not yet reached a majority of the house. Mr. Mann stated that a number, principally new members, had written that they desired to look over the situation and investigate the situation more thoroughly before replying in a way that might be considered as a piedge.

It is said that only one member of the house has replied that he will oppose the re-election of Mr. Cannon as speaker. Attention is gradually shifting from the speakership to the proposal to amend the rules of the house. There are indications that the speaker may not offer much opposition to some such amendments at least.

the bureau of corporations thus far has been directed to this end, and the results have demonstrated its value. It has been shown in many cases that the mere publication of improper business methods has led to the immediate abandonment of those methods. But the scope of this work and its beneficial results could be greatly extended by the establishment of a general federal system of supervision of interstate corporations.

In the portion devoted to the Bureau of Labor, Secretary Straus says:

The law granting compensation to government employes, passed at the first session of the present congress, should be extended in scope so as to embrace classes of employes not now included, and should be made more liberal in its terms. The compensation at present paid—one year's earnings—is pitifully inadequate where total disability results from an injury, or where death leaves a dependant family.

We are probably the richest nation in the world, and in the amount of compensation provided for in this bill we are particularly niggardly in comparison with the provisions in this regard made by the poorest countries of Europe.
