Practically everybody is at home from school just now, and as the holidays are all oo short for the fun that has been planned, the young people will spend today visiting THIS WEEK REPETITION OF LAST with the home folks and start out again Monday for another week's round of dances and luncheons and suppers and the other things counted appropriate for the days between Christmas and New Year.

> Next to Santa Claus, Cupid is about the busiest person around. Two interesting engagements were announced during the week, both of the young women being from out of the city, that of Mr. Thomas Creigh to Miss Connor of Burlington, Is., and Mr. Robert Shirley to Miss Mae Dugan of Butte, Mont. Miss Dugan spent several weeks in Omaha last year as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGinn. Miss Connor has been the popular guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Cooley. Dame Rumor says that there will of the engagement of two young people, both of whom live in Kountze Place. The girl is a popular young woman just out of school, and the young man, who graduated from a military school last year, is now in the wholesale business with his father.

A number of watch parties are planned for New Year's eve, both in private homes and also in the leading cafes, when special programs have been prepared. Mr. Elmer Redick will give a large bridge supper for the members of the younger set at his home. A "ball poudre" will be given at Fort Crook and a number of small dinner parties will precede the hop, to which a number of Omaha people have been invited. Many large parties have been planned to enjoy the programs at the cafes, and a number of eard and dancing clubs will also have parties on that night.

Shortly after the holldays there will be Mrs. Douglas; Clematis club, Mrs. Stickler.

The preachers of Columbia, Mo., have indersed the twenty-five minute sermon. Methodist, Baptist, Episcopal and Christian churches all expressed themselves as in favor of the shorter sermon. They were all of the opinion that the hour and the hour-and-a-half sermons were out of date. They thought that a preacher should have his sermon carefully prepared and should stop when he is through.

A century ago there were 100 "churches within the square mile" of London city. Now there are little more than half that number. It has been suggested that thirty of these should be demolished and the funds thus liberated employed in church work elsewhere. The site of All Hallows, in Loudard street is said to be worth in Lombard street, is said to be worth £800,000, while that of St. Michael's, Cornhill, is valued at no less than £750,000. St. Peter's, Cornhill, stands on equally valuable ground. The aggregate site values of the thirty churches which it is proposed should be incorporated with other parishes its put down at £250,000.

should be incorporated with other parishes is put down at £3,600,000.

The Rev. James E. Cassidy of St. Mary's Catholic church, Fall River, Mass., who was one of the leaders of the successful no license fight in that city has served notice that in his parish, at least the new prohibitory law is not going to be a dead letter if he has anything to say in the matter. "Already the newspapers are discussing ways and means for practically nullifying the verdict," he recently told his congregation. "I serve this notice that so far as St. Mary's parish is concerned, ilquor will not be sold contrary to law. Neither myself nor my priests will enter a house with the bleased sacrament where liquor is sold in any tenement. This is a fair warning."

Cocaine Law in Illinois. The supreme court of Illinois has upheld the new cocaine law of that state and dealt a hard blow to patent medicines containing the drug. The case at issue was a fine of $500 imposed upon two Chicago druggists, who were convicted of having sold a catarrh powder containing cocaine. The druggists contended that the powder was sold by a clerk, but the supreme court held the owners responsible. The law provides that cocaine shall not be sold in any form except on a physician's prescription.
