

BRANDEIS HOME TO MILLARD

Dewey Avenue Dwelling Sells for Sixty-Five Thousand Dollars. SENATOR WILL SOON OCCUPY IT

Arthur D. Brandeis Will Reside at Florence Country Place in Summer and New York in Winter.

Arthur D. Brandeis has sold his residence at Thirty-eighth and Dewey to former Senator J. H. Millard for $65,000.

It has been known for some time that the Brandeis residence was on the list and this was taken to argue that Arthur D. Brandeis, who is the president of the J. L. Brandeis & Sons company, planned to leave Omaha permanently.

The growth of our interests demand that the company be represented in New York during a part of the year, and my family and I shall live there during the winter months.

This house which Senator Millard has bought was built three years ago and its cost is approximately what he has paid for it.

The house which Senator Millard has bought was built three years ago and its cost is approximately what he has paid for it.

The Brandeis residence is supposed to be the second most costly to build in Omaha. The Joslyn castle, occupying the space from Thirty-eighth and Fortieth, on Dodge, is generally held to have cost $100,000, while the Cudahy home at Thirty-seventh and Dewey cost $500 less than the Brandeis residence, or $99,000.

The dwelling which Senator Millard acquires is conceded to be the most artistic residence which an architect ever evolved for an Omaha man. It is built of cream colored pressed brick, and has rooms enough for all conceivable needs and desires.

NEW THEATER WORK AT ONCE. Excavation Starts First of January and Building Opens One Year Hence.

The first spadeful of earth in excavating for the new Brandeis theater and office building probably will fly January 1, 1909.

W. J. Burgess of the Burgess & Woodard syndicate, who will manage the new theater, returned from Chicago Tuesday, where he, Emil Brandeis and Woodard looked over every theater in the city.

The plans for the eight-story office building, which will include the theater, are now being drawn by John Latenser, at whose recommendation the St. Louisians were engaged for the theatrical plans.

"The lobby and foyer will be features of the theater," declared Mr. Burgess. "We shall not run the seats clear back to the doors, but leave a broad foyer for promenading there. The seating capacity of the theater will be 1,800, and while we could make this much larger, it is not desired to sacrifice the foyer and the comfort of patrons to more seats."

"The lobby will be practically part of the office building, and this will give us the whole 132 feet for the theater. All other Omaha theaters are compelled to cut into the 132 feet for their lobby, but there will be no such restriction in this case."

The entrance to office building and theater will be on Seventeenth street, opposite the center of that side of the Brandeis store. The entire building, it has been announced, will cost $500,000, and there is an evident determination on the part of all concerned in the project to provide Omaha with the finest structure that money can put up.

A plethora of exits will be provided from the theater, and this and the office building will be of absolutely fireproof construction.

CLAIM AND COST WIDE APART. Thirty-Eight Thousand Damages Asked by Mercer, Who Bought Cambridge for $250.

The B. D. Mercer company has completed the raising of the old Cambridge hotel at Thirtieth street and Capitol avenue, this course being decided upon when the council refused a permit to repair the structure, which was condemned nearly a year ago.

Plans are being worked out by President Burton of the Grand Detour Plow company for the organization of a house in Omaha similar to the one which he has in Kansas City, to be known as the "Big Four" and to handle farm implements and vehicles.

As the Grand Detour Plow company is of itself a big institution, the combination which Mr. Burton proposes to make in Omaha promises another large implement house which will take rank among the strongest houses in the city.

According to the present plans of the Grand Detour people W. A. Chapman, who has been the local representative of the company, will be manager of the combination, which will be known as the Big Four.

The company in Kansas City handles the lines of the Staver Buggy company and the Thomas Manufacturing company. The Staver buggies are well known and at present are handled by the Linsinger Implement company, are out of the city.

Other implement dealers who know of the proposed combination say it will mean a big house for Omaha.

At present the Grand Detour company occupies offices and a small warehouse at Ninth and Jackson streets. There is talk of the new company taking the old John Deere Plow company building on Tenth street, building the necessary additions and using it for the home of the Big Four.
