WHAT THE WOMEN ARE DOING

W. J. Bryan Will Tell Social Science Department of Visit to Tolstoi.

W.C.T.U. OFFICERS TO VISIT HERE

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens and Miss Anna Gordon Will Come to Omaha in Near Future to Arrange for National Convention.

William J. Bryan will address the social science department of the Woman's club at its opening meeting next Monday afternoon, at the First Congregational church. He will give an informal talk on his recent visit to Count Leo Tolstoi. The meeting will convene at 3 o'clock instead of 2:30 and besides Mr. Bryan's address there will be a brief review of Jane Addams' book, "Newer Ideals of Peace," by Mrs. William Alderson, and vocal music by Mrs. Joel C. Hancock.

W. C. T. U. Officers Coming.

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens of Maine, president, and Miss Anna Gordon of Evanston, Ill., vice president of the National Women's Christian Temperance union, will come to Omaha the latter part of February or early in March to arrange with the local unions and others for the annual convention of the National Women's Christian Temperance union to be held here in October. Mrs. Stevens and Miss Gordon will honor guests at the third of the series of musicals to be given by Frances Willard union for the benefit of the convention entertainment fund and the public baths.

Mrs. Frances B. Head, president of the Nebraska union, will be in Omaha the week of January 14, conferring with the local woman regarding the convention and will be an honored guest at the first of the series of musicals the evening of January 14.

Women Raise Funds.

The women of Hanscom Park Methodist church who assumed chief financial responsibility for the recent redecorating and furnishing of the church have planned a series of entertainments for the benefit of their treasury. Two of these entertainments will consist of programs of dramatic readings and music; a sacred concert has been arranged for another evening and a fourth will include a lecture on "Jean Valjean" by the pastor, Rev. Scott Hyde.

A Matter of Education.

Miss Chrystal Macmillan, the brilliant woman who so ably headed the brilliant women university graduates in their claim for a vote in choosing the member of Parliament elected from their colleges, has issued an encouraging letter to these graduates. It was she who pleaded their case and she urges them not to be discouraged, assuring them that although the House of Lords decided against them the cause has had a wonderful educational effect and has awakened interest in circles that have never before been able to reach. Miss Macmillan is confident that their success is merely a matter of education and that such opportunities for a dignified presentation of their claim, are not to be counted failures, even though they are unsuccessful in their results.

Fortieth Anniversary.

The Brooklyn Woman's club celebrated its fortieth anniversary January 1 and the celebration has occasioned wide comment, not for any unique feature, but because it marks another anniversary of this organization of women who have so long stood for all that is best in culture in altruism and in progress. Only two of its founders are still living but if these two women had also passed before the close of the year the anniversary of the club would still have attracted attention, for its organizers laid a foundation for a club that will continue to live and work.

NO, BLAKE WILL NOT LOSE JOB

Motormen May Break Rules to Save Lives Any Day.

SO SAYS STREET RAILWAY MAN

Arthur Wortenbyke, at Karbach Block, runs his elevator back and forth throughout the fire.

"No, Blake will not be discharged because he broke a rule to save a boy's life," said Louis Nash, superintendent of transportation of the street railway company. "I am not satisfied that he did break a rule as far as goes, but I suppose the narrative reads better thus. At any rate motormen may be considered privileged to run ahead of their schedule whenever a human life is at stake."

Blake, who took the first car across the Douglas street bridge and for thirty years has never violated a company's rule even in thought, ran away ahead of time Thursday in order that he might gain enough on his schedule to buy an outfit of clothes at his own expense for the boy of eight years, whom he picked up at the end of the Benson line, at the point of freezing to death.

Passengers on the line did their best Friday to make Blake violate another rule about entering into conversation with motormen, for all wished to shake his hand and congratulate him. Partly because of the rule and partly because Blake is modest and did not wish to talk of his feat, these passengers found him a tough proposition conversationally.

Another Hero Bobs Up.

Arthur Wortenbyke was another hero of Thursday. He is the elevator operator in the Karbach building where the film company first occurred. He ran his car up and down throughout the blaze and carried all the men and women of the fourth and fifth floors to the ground without disturbance to his customary nonchalant air. His task was not an easy one, for the hallways and shaft were so filled with smoke that he could not see for a time and the excited condition of some of the male passengers did not render his task the easier.

The dreamaking girls were the calmest people around," said Wortenbyke, "and if you are getting up any fool hero article put them in, too. They were a whole lot more self-possessed than the men, or some of the men, anyhow. Of course they did not have their eyebrows singed off, as did a couple of the fellows in the film company office, which I suppose would make anyone more or less excited."

"And, say, if you put in anything about me I'll lay for you."

Socty Gowns Burned.

There is woe and lamentation and bitter gnashing of teeth in West Farnam precincts over the fire because some of the loveliest built costumes and gowns there ever were perished in the flames. The considerable number of society women who had taken up the fad of making their own clothes at the Moulton dreamaking school are weeping softly and saying: "What's the use? I did not mind those three linen suits, my dear, but that old Irish lace can never be replaced, and I don't suppose I can get a cent's worth of insurance anyhow."

Such a theme with the appropriate variations has been sung in a minor key in a large number of boudoirs since the fire.

JUDGE ESTELLE MAKES HIT

Brings Tears to Eyes of Plattsburgh Audience Speaking on Training a Child.

Judge Lee Estelle who is presiding over the Juvenile department of the district court at present, made a strong impression on a Plattsburgh audience a few evenings ago in an address on the training of children. The Plattsburgh Journal gives this report of the meeting:

One of the best things that it has been the opportunity of the people of Plattsburgh to enjoy in making their church a more perfect church has been given by Judge Lee S. Estelle of the juvenile court, of Plattsburgh, who spoke on training a child.

It is none too warm yet," answered Judge.

Go into any store or shop or office in the city and express an opinion on the state of the temperature. Some are warm, say it is cold, or say it is just right, and ten to one the answer will be in accord. The absolute temperature has seemingly little to do with many individuals' views about the weather, and those who do not wish to get into an argument far more heated than the actual temperature just now have discovered that the easiest way out is to agree with whatever view is expressed.

How fallible the ordinary judgment is about temperatures has often been shown by the experiment with the three basins of water, one hot, one tepid and one cold.

By varying the order in which the hands are plunged in, the tepid basin can be made to feel decidedly warm or extremely cool.

Thursday night about 8:30 two men emerged from the Bee building on Farnam street.

"My, it is moderating rapidly," ejaculated one.

"Tis, sure, any amount warmer than it was this afternoon," was the ready response.

As a matter of fact the weather had not moderated one particle since the afternoon.

At 2 p.m. the thermometer registered 6 above zero and it registered precisely that same for every hour after up to 9 p.m.

IOWA PARENTS LOOK FOR BOY

Lad at Detention Home Meets the Description with Just One Exception.

Little Tommy Burns, who is at the Detention school, is likely to be the little fellow whom Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Draper of Atlantic, Ia., are looking for.

They are looking for a 14-year-old boy with blue eyes, a scar on the back of the head, a gold-colored tooth and brown hair.

This description answers Tommy's to the dot, with the one exception of the eyes, which are a chestnut brown. The little fellow whom the parents are looking for is Fred Draper, and they are offering a reward of $100 for his return.

About a year ago Tommy was taken to Chicago to be identified by certain parents who were looking for a son, but he was immediately returned to Omaha.

MILLARD TRADED IN LOTS

Includes Thirty-Ninth and Davenport Site in Purchase Price of Brandes Home.

The sale of the Arthur D. Brandes home to former Senator J. H. Millard now appears on record, the consideration named being $15,000. This is recorded at the same time the transfer to Brandes from Millard of the latter's property at Thirty-ninth and Davenport for $10,000, and evidently forming a part of the deal for the residence. It has been stated that some downtown real estate owned by Millard also figured in the deal, but no record appears of this.

The departure of Mr. Brandes and his family for New York will take place Monday or Tuesday. They will return in the
