UNCLE BILLY SNOWDEN DEAD

First White Settler of Omaha Rounds Out Eighty-Four Years.

DIES AT HIS GRACE STREET HOME

Funeral Services Will Be Held Monday at Jackson Undertaking Parlor and Interment at Prospect Hill.

The first white settler of Omaha, William Pleasant (Uncle Billy) Snowden, died of old age Saturday at 8:35 a. m., at his home, 228 Grace street, where he had lived for some time, attended by his housekeeper, Mrs. Lewis. Mrs. Snowden died many years ago. On April 25 he would have been 84 years of age. Since July 11, 1854, fifty-four and a half years ago, he had lived in this city and watched it grow.

On Monday morning, when the funeral will be held, the body will rest at the Jackson undertaking parlor, 175 Leavenworth street, where old friends of "Uncle Billy" may see the body for the last time. The funeral will be at the undertaker's and is to be strictly private. The list of pallbearers has not yet been announced. Interment will be in the Snowden family lot in Prospect Hill cemetery.

The constancy and the gallantry that were Uncle Billy's virtues under all circumstances, he had inherited from a southern parentage, for he was born in Nicholas county, Kentucky. As if to further guarantee his amiability his parents, upon his arrival, April 25, 1853, christened him William Pleasant Snowden, and pleasant he ever remained.

When he was 7 years of age his parents removed to Pike county, Missouri, and in June, 1856, he gathered the nation's service as a soldier in the First Missouri Mounted volunteers, serving a year under Colonel Alexander Doniphan, and participating in the Sacramento charge, when 80 of his comrades routed 4,000 Spaniards from the latter's breast works.

Returning from the war, he took a farm a few miles west of St. Joseph, Mo., and settled there, marrying Rachel Larson on September 9, 1847. It was in St. Joseph during the next few years that he first tried his voice and diplomacy at auctioneering, which became his business when he removed to Council Bluffs in 1853.

Comes to Omaha.

It was in July, 1854, just before the new steam ferry boat arrived to supplant the old one, propelled by oars, that William P. Snowden brought his courageous wife and three children across the river to lay a cornerstone, as it were, for the white population of Nebraska. Other white people had been here before, but not to settle, and July 11 found the Snowden family the first resident population of Omaha.

Indians there were plenty, with the Omahas swarmed at Salem Grove, near Fort Crook, and the Pawnees near Fremont. Uncle Billy had many a scrimmage in those first days and once saved himself and a party from probable massacre by the diplomatic presentation of a plug of chewing tobacco to a thieving chief, who had been overtaken with stolen horses, but whose warriors were too many to be successfully coped with.

At a point which is now on the map as the corner of Twelfth and Jackson streets the Snowden home was built. It was of logs, but the owner was a brick moulder, and it was a brickyard that he proposed to launch as an initial business enterprise, bearding the hands who worked for him. Three days after the house was completed the first spade was stuck into the clay at a point which is now Fourteenth and Leavenworth streets, but which then became the first brickyard in Nebraska. The clay was for the brick that should be the foundation of the first territorial capitol, then to be built on the west side of Ninth street between Douglas and Farnam streets, and facing Douglas. It was not until two years later that the erection of the more pretentious state house was undertaken on the present site of the high school.

Seven Years of Peace.

For seven years William Snowden was a man of peace, or as nearly such as the conditions of the west then made possible, but in September, 1861, he enlisted at Council Bluffs with Company B of the Fifth Iowa cavalry and served until 1864 in the field, except five months as recruiting officer at Council Bluffs. He entered the service as a sergeant, but was later made sergeant major.

The year after his return from the war he was made a constable and a constable he continued to be until 1882, when he slipped on a pavement and hurt his left hip. Since then he had to use crutches and lived for various terms at the Old Soldiers' home at Leavenworth, St. Joseph's hospital, at the home of his daughter, Helen M. Snowden, and lately at the Grace street home with his housekeeper.

Beside the title of constable he held that of deputy sheriff under Sheriff Thomas L. Sutton and later under Sheriff Andrew Delone. Incidentally he had been city marshal and as such was a terror to the three-card monte men of the early '70s.

Of the seven children whom the Omaha pioneer reared with the city five survive him. They are Mrs. V. H. Thomas of Valley, Neb.; Mrs. Julius Wilmitz of Cheyenne, George F. Snowden of Omaha, Mrs. George L. White of San Francisco and Helen M. Snowden of Omaha.

KRUG PARK MAY TURN ARID

Benson City Council Considers Question of Renewing Liquor License at Resort.

There may be no liquor sold at Krug park this summer. The Benson city council is considering the question of a renewal of a license at the park and wrestled with the problem for several hours Friday night. No decision was reached, although all the evidence is in on both sides, and the council voted to meet in special session Monday evening and render a verdict.

The case hinges in part as to whether Rudolph Timmler, applicant for the license, is acting for himself or for the Krug Brewing company. The opposition charges that Timmler is only a figure-head and has been put up by the Krugs, the Western Amusement company and W. W. Cole, manager of the Western Amusement corporation.

Timmler himself took the stand and stated that his agreement with the amusement company was a bona fide leasing of the concession, for which he had agreed to pay $50 a day. The $1000 which he put up for the license, he declared, he had borrowed on his note from the Castle Realty company. That company, Elmer Thomas, appearing for the Civic league and the Women's Christian Temperance union of Benson, declared to be myth.

Timmler and Rev. Mr. Campbell, pastor of the Baptist church of Benson, contradicted one another as to a conversation held between them, Campbell affirming and Timmler denying that the latter had admitted to the former that he was simply a dummy in the matter.

GLAD OF GOMPERS DECISION

Head of Leather Workers Says It Will Throw Whole Subject Open to Discussion.

E. J. Baker of Kansas City, general president of the United Brotherhood of Leather Workers on Horse Goods, is in Omaha on his annual visit to members of the Leather Workers' union, and incidentally to confer with the leather trade for amicable adjustment between employer and employee of whatever differences may arise.

"There is no significance in my visit to Omaha other than to stimulate the leather workers to more active organization in their own interests," said Mr. Baker. "I have but recently been before the committee on tariff revision at Washington to urge the retention of the tariff of at least 45 per cent on leather goods. We had hoped to secure a tariff rate of 60 per cent, but had to be satisfied with 45 per cent."

"I do not criticize the action of Judge Wright in the sentence of Mr. Gompers, Mr. Morrison and Mr. Mitchell, but at the same time it is the best possible thing that could have happened for the cause of labor, in that the discussion of the situation will call public attention to the attitude of the employer and the employed."

Mr. Baker will address an open meeting at the Labor Temple Saturday evening. He will discuss the benefits and absolute rights of the laboring class in the matter of organization.

M'VANN LECTURES AT AMES

Secretary of Grain Exchange Tells Short Course Students How to Sell Their Grain.

E. J. McVann returned Saturday morning from Ames, Ia., where he delivered an address to the students of the short course on "Merchandising Grain and Grain Inspection." The address covered somewhat the same ground as traversed by the speaker at the same place to a different audience last year. With regard to grain inspection McVann outlined the scope of the different systems, federal, state and private, and contrasted particularly a state system such as is established in Chicago and a private system as through the Omaha Grain exchange.

"It is really an impressive sight," said Mr. McVann, "to see 800 grown men like these short-course students leaving their farms for several weeks to study the scientific side of farming and the interest and attention displayed in all branches of the work at the college is quite edifying to any spectator.

1/2 OFF.....

Our regular Low Prices on all broken lots—Men's, Young Men's and Children's Suits and Overcoats.

The mere mention of the fact that a quality store like this would conduct a "Special Sale" was sufficient to crowd our store all of Saturday.

The first experience of the new store with a REDUCTION SALE has been extremely pleasant to us and extremely profitable to the public—judging by the complimentary remarks we have heard. Lots of people have been so often disappointed at "Sales" that they doubted the genuineness of our statements until they came. They found only the newest and best garments, by the world's best tailors at a bona fide reduction of one-half. We've been busy, but we still have thousands to select from and the
