A Bunch of Short Stories

His Sign Down. DISHEVELED man, much the worse for liquor, staggered out of a Main "speakeasy" and laboriously propped himself against the door. For a while he owlily surveyed the passers-by. Suddenly his foot slipped and he collapsed in a heap on the sidewalk. A moment later he was snoring. A hurrying pedestrian paused reflectively surveyed the fallen man for a few seconds, and then poked his head in the door. "Oh, Frank," he called. "Frank. Come out here a minute." Presently the proprietor of the joint, smoking a fat cigar, emerged. He blinked in the bright sunlight. "Hello, Hud," he said pleasantly. "What's up?" "Had jacked his thumb toward the slumberer at the sidewalk. "Ter sign has fall down," he explained, and briskly resumed his walk uptown.—Everybody's Magazine.

The doctor smiled quizzically. "What do you understand by double entry bookkeeping, Jim?" Jim stared at the doctor, astonished, his big, stolid eyes opening wide as he ran his hand through his shock of whitening brown hair. "Well, do tell, doctor; don't you know? An' you a college man! Why, man, it's just as simple as rolling off a log. A man comes along and asks for orchards and you gives 'em to 'im, and ef he don't put his money down on the counter then you charge him up in the book for thirty days. Then ef he don't pay you in thirty days, or, say, six weeks, you puts him down in the book again. There—ain't that simple?"—New York Times.

Eligible to the Assembly Club. Sir Archibald Geikie, the distinguished geologist, who will probably succeed Lord Rayleigh as president of the Royal Society, tells a good story in his capital book of Scottish Reminiscences. "I was quite sure you had been in my neighborhood," a friend said to Sir Archibald. "I met the old farmer of G., who had a strange tale to tell me. "Dod, Mr. Calticart," he began, "I ran across the queerest body the other day. As I was coming by the head of the clough I thought I heard a wheen tinkers quarrellin', but when I looked down there was so wee stoat man. Whiles he was chappin the rocks wi' a hammer, whiles he was writin' in a book, whiles fetchin' wi' the thorns and miscelin them for 'at that was bad. When he cam up frae the burn, him an' 'a' about the stanes, and hoo they showed that Scotland was ance like Greenland, amoured in ice. A very entertainin' body, Mr. Calticart, but—an awful, awful leech."—Titi-Bits.

Wealth of Adams County (Continued from Page One.) library, large business blocks and creditable residences. Many industries have already been established and all are doing well. Four large brick plants turning out millions of brick annually, a large roller flouring mill in operation night and day, a harness factory, cigar factory, and minor enterprises, are earning large dividends for their investors. Hastings offers many advantages in the way of education. The development of the city school system has kept pace with the growth of the town. There are five ward school buildings, all of brick, and a high school building, which is the largest and best equipped in the state, outside of Lincoln and Omaha. Instruction is given in all grades from the kindergarten to high school graduation. Hastings has been well and economically governed. The tax rate is comparatively low, especially when one considers the numerous advantages which are not enjoyed by residents of the average town of much larger population. Its public school system, its water system and its electric lighting system, are all conducted according to the highest standard of efficiency. It has three beautiful parks, one of which includes a lake and is adjacent to the grounds of the Hastings Country Club. Probably no city of its size in the west has more churches and more enthusiastic congregations than Hastings. Services were held upon the Hastings townsite before the municipal corporation was formed. The first services were held in a sod house. There are now eighteen church organizations in the city, most of which have modern and substantial buildings. The remarkable increase in the deposits
