HAPPINESS FOR BALD HEADS Ninety Per Cent of Them Can Raise Crows of New Hair. IT'S ALL IN PROPER TREATMENT Omaha Shows About Dr. Nott's Q-bar Restorer, Which Brings Back to Q-bar Gray Hair the Natural Color of Youth. In "The Prisoner of Chillon" Lord Byron wrote: "My hair is grayer than not with years." Gray hair is not always a sign of age. Nebraskaans just now are giving considerable interest in Dr. Nott's Q-bar Hair Restorer, which is really responsible for a happy national shortage in its gray hair crop. There are enough preparations for the hair on the market to float a battleship. The promises given by some of them are laughable. For this Southern discovery of Dr. Nott's, however, no extravagant claims are made, but positive restoration of gray, faded hair to its natural color is assured. Proofs in support of this are abundant, but people who prefer a guarantee are met with the proposition that if three bottles of Dr. Nott's Q-bar Hair Restorer do not turn hair from gray to the desired darker color, the druggist of whom the preparation has been bought will return all the money paid for them. Dr. Nott's Restorer has arrested many cases of premature baldness. The problem of restoring color to gray hair, arresting falling hair, the cure of dandruff and all diseases of the scalp was made a life study by Dr. Nott, and in his Restorer he has offered a solution. It can be had of The Myers-Dillon Drug Co. One bottle can be obtained free. Ask about this plan. For sale at all druggists.

SUICIDE OF GIRL WAS FEARED

Mrs. Lamoreaux Warned Mrs. DUNN About Bennie Talbot. FACTS COME OUT AT THE INQUEST When Lovers Broke Off Girl's Depression Led Boy's Mother to Apprehend Just What Happened. Dear Dannie: Please forgive me for coming to your house to do this awful thing, but I have nowhere else to go. Don't be sorry; I wish you back, because I am happier to die. You are the best friend I ever had. I'm sorry you all this bother. You don't make such a mess, but my uncle will be up here and will pay you for any damage made. Will you please see that I wear my little pink silk, and don't let them wash me or fuss over me. I am all ready to be planted except my dress. Have Harry sell my pins and chain and give the money to papa. Try to comfort her, Dannie. You know how to cheer people up. Goodbye, dear. I love you. Hide this so it won't get in the papers. Word for word, the above was the letter written by Miss Bennie Talbot about 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, in the home of her friend, Mrs. R. Dunn, at 424 1/2 Bee street. After sealing and laying the letter on the table this evening, Bennie Talbot, discouraged girl of 22, went upstairs to the bedroom of her friend, took the latter's revolver from under a pillow, placed herself crossways of the bed and, with the muzzle of the pistol in her mouth, pulled the trigger. One shot was sufficient, for when the revolver was taken from her, she laid four chambers of the fire in the weapon were still loaded. Having fired the shot, Miss Talbot had crossed her two hands on her breast, the right one still holding onto the weapon. These salient facts were developed at the inquest held at Healey & Healey's undertaking rooms Thursday morning and the coroner's jury returned this verdict: We, the jury, find that the deceased, Bennie Talbot, came to her death by committing suicide by using a Schickler revolver; and we further find the cause of suicide to be dependency. The jury was composed of W. W. Wilson, G. W. Nelson, A. Rubenstein, William Thomas, E. Metz, Joseph Teahon. Miss Talbot had known just where to lay her hands on Mrs. Dunn's revolver, because she had been a frequent visitor at the Dunn home. If she had sought for it on the previous Friday, however, she would not have found it. Mrs. Dunn testified that on that day Mrs. Lamoreaux had telephoned her to "put everything away, as Bennie is liable to do something." Mrs. Lamoreaux is the mother of Douglas Palmer Lamoreaux, the young man who was keeping company with Miss Talbot and who Wednesday told the coroner's jury that he had been engaged to her for about a month. On the Wednesday evening preceding her death Miss Talbot had called young Lamoreaux on the phone at his home, because, as he put it, "he thought I had been acting funny lately." During the conversation he told Miss Talbot he thought they could not be happy together, that he "did not love her well enough that way." She felt so badly over the result of her talk with Lamoreaux that on the following evening the young man got his mother to accompany him to the room of Miss Talbot and her mother, at 210 Douglas street. Then they took her home with them for the night, after she had dumbly prostrated herself on the bed in her own room, and she slept with Mrs. Lamoreaux, or in her room. Warns Mrs. Dunn. It was on the day following that the latter called on Mrs. Dunn and warned her to put away everything that might be dangerous. Mrs. Dunn testified she did hide a bottle of carbolic acid, also her gun, as she continually called it, under the springs of a couch downstairs. Then the storm blew over and on Monday night last the revolver was resurrected and taken upstairs to its accustomed place, Mrs. Dunn explaining that she lived alone and had it for protection. On Monday evening the Talbot girl was in the Dunn home and complained of being sick. Mrs. Dunn ministered to her, but saw nothing in the girl's manner to indicate that she should be watched. So Mrs. Dunn went away to her work on Tuesday morning, and that was the last time she saw the girl alive. During the testimony of Mrs. Dunn and of Herace E. Sarson it was evident that all the vital history of the girl's life was being developed, but no one seemed to care to probe any deeper than was necessary. Assistant County Attorney Cook was lenient in his questioning, the more so, perhaps, because Mrs. Dunn was weeping and hysterical, and at one point swooned for a moment or two in the witness chair. Sarson had met the girl, as he first spoke it, last Sunday night, but a moment afterward he could not recall when he had met her last, and had no sort of idea as to where the meeting occurred. He left the stand still forgetting. He is "happy." This young man is the "Benny" who is requested to sell the pin and chain. He, like all the rest, was familiar with the revolver, as the whole bunch had been firing it from the porch of the Dunn home on New Year's eve. While the testimony of the witnesses was being heard in the rear room of the coroner's undertaking parlors, neither the father, mother or brother of Miss Talbot was present. The mother and the brother are prostrated, and the father is in little better condition, having been forced to retire from the scene of the inquest before the presence of a tumor, or some similar swelling, which he said might possibly have been a contributing cause to the dependency under which the girl labored unavailingly. While the inquest was proceeding the face of the dead girl, surrounded by an aureole of black hair, could be seen in its silent majesty as the jurors and two or three witnesses were taken to the tier to be sworn. After all other witnesses had been heard Coroner's Physician Dunn outlined the nature of the wound. He also testified to the presence of a tumor, or some similar swelling, which he said might possibly have been a contributing cause to the dependency under which the girl labored unavailingly. MRS. TALBOT NOT YET NORMAL Mother of Girl Still Quite Sick and Mrs. Lamoreaux Not Well. Although more rational than she was Tuesday night and Wednesday, Mrs. Talbot, mother of the young woman who committed suicide Tuesday afternoon, remains more or less oblivious to the fact that her daughter is dead. She is still in a greatly weakened condition from the shock and needed the care of a physician. Thursday morning she was moved to South Omaha and will stay with a friend, Mrs. Julian H. Jonte, who lives at 128 North Twenty-third street. Mrs. R. E. Lamoreaux, mother of the young man who is said to have been engaged to marry Miss Talbot, has im-

GERMAN VETERAN AT REST Prof. Frank M. Steinhäuser Buried with Military Honors by Landwehr Veterans. A military funeral under the auspices of the Landwehr veterans, an organization of German war veterans, was accorded Frank M. Steinhäuser Thursday afternoon. Prof. Steinhäuser was the well known German veteran and bandmaster, who died Tuesday morning. Fully 200 members of the Landwehr veterans, accompanied by a military band, were present to do honor to their dead brother. Chaplain Jacob Hauck of the order of veterans conducted the funeral services, which was also attended by the relatives of Prof. Steinhäuser, who had in America and by many friends of the former soldier, whose career closed after the Franco-Prussian war with the reception of the decoration of the Iron Cross. The active participants were Colonel Waldhelm, Frank Crawford, Henry Wilhelm, Carl Harrmann, John Shary, Henry Rohrs, J. J. Hoff and W. H. Schmoeller. The men chosen as honorary pallbearers included A. W. BANE ON THE PENCIL HABIT School Authorities Try to Prevent Contagion of Disease Among the Children. Public school authorities have again taken up the subject of the indiscriminate uses of lead pencils by the pupils of the city schools. When Willie Jones, after putting his pencil in his mouth, loans it to Johnnie Smith in the next seat, geriatric disease is liable to be spread. The Farnam Street school has an excellent method for looking after this difficulty. Each teacher has a pencil case with rows corresponding to the rows of desks in the room. Each pupil has a separate pocket in this case, where his pencil is placed at the close of each day's session. Each morning the teacher writes the child's name in ink near the point. If the name is blurred in the mouth and a smudge is made, it means many bad bruises, which Bucklen's Arnica Balm heals quickly, as it does scorpions, burns, etc. For sale by Beaton Drug Co. WHY THE STUDENTS LAUGHED Miss Hughes Relates Interesting Experience in Her Work as Missions Lecturer. Miss Edith Hughes, lecturing in Omaha at present under the Home Missions Board of the Presbyterian church, relates an incident of her work that is of peculiar interest. "I was speaking to the students of the Tusculum, Tenn., college about conditions among the Mexicans of the southwest when I spent much time," says Miss Hughes, "and I observed a tendency toward merriment among the students. I wondered what I had done or said to provoke amusement and then my eye chanced to fall upon a young man in the rear of the audience who, I recognized as a Mexican. To avoid saying anything that might hurt his feelings, I changed my line of talk somewhat and related an incident that had come under my own observation in New Mexico. Three young Mexicans, taken from their native homes of poverty and unrefinement, were induced to attend the mission school, and I told how they progressed in book learning and moral conduct and finally they left the little mission school and went east to attend a seminary where they might prepare themselves for the ministry. "All the time I was relating this experience, though, I could still observe that manifestation of amusement. The young Mexican seemed most amused of all and the situation was becoming oppressive to me. Once I thought of leaving the rostrum, for I could not imagine any reason for this merriment. When I had concluded this young Mexican came up and introduced himself to me. "I am one of the three boys and the other two are also here," he said. "It was, of course, a revelation for me, for I really did not know the school to which they had gone."

Major Shillock has been sentenced to be reprimanded. MERCURY AGAIN GOES CRAZY

Weather is to Turn Some More Somersaults, Says Uncle Sam's Lieutenant. Colonel Welsh, Uncle Sam's lieutenant in the weather business, has conjured up another combination of atmospheric gyrations to spring on a defenseless people. He is good enough to warn them, though, and says that they may prepare for a few more choice mercurial somersaults. Here is his edict: A disturbance, central this morning over the eastern slope of the middle Rocky mountains, will move rapidly north-northwestward, attested by rains Thursday and Thursday night in the central valleys, turning to snow Friday in the Missouri and upper Mississippi valleys, with falling temperature, and followed by generally fair and colder weather Saturday and Sunday. There will be rain Friday in the Ohio valley, the middle Atlantic and north portions of the South Atlantic and east Gulf states, and rain or snow in the lower lake region and New England, continuing Saturday in the lower lake region and the Atlantic states, and followed by fair and colder weather Sunday, Monday and probably Tuesday. In the northwest and Rocky mountain districts the weather will be generally fair during the next three or four days, with lower temperatures Thursday and Friday, extending Friday and Friday night into the lake region and Ohio valley. Temperatures will probably be below zero in the extreme northwest tonight, but there is no immediate prospect of very cold weather to the eastward or southward. There will be a rise in temperature by Saturday in the extreme northwest, followed by another fall, with rising pressure about Sunday or Sunday night. CONDUCTOR GETS A SHOCK Might Have Fallen When Honest Woman Pays Fare of Day Before, but for Crowd. But for the jam of the passengers in his car a conductor on the Farnam street car line might have fallen flat Wednesday afternoon as he accepted two fares from a woman. "Here's your change, lady; better take it, I ain't got all day." "Oh, don't you know, I owe you a nickel from yesterday? You know, I was on your car and didn't have any money. This time is to pay for today and yesterday." This was the dialogue that brought out the fact. "The conductor swooned, but the press of his passengers being so great as scarcely to admit of the passage of one person through the car, he was prevented from falling. "Er, eh—why, yes, yes, that's so," he finally managed to say. "And every man, woman and child in that confused mass tried to get a pair of eyes focused on the strange woman. MONEY TO SALVE HIS SOUL Fifteen Thousand Dollars is What John Barry Asks for His Injured Feelings. John Briggs, chief of police of South Omaha, has a pronounced habit of arresting John Barry and Barry feels himself injured thereby to the extent of $15,000. Barry's petition for damages states that he has been arrested by Briggs or at Briggs' orders so many times that he cannot remember the number. In each and every case, he asserts, he was exculpated when his case was tried. Inasmuch, the petition says, as the city of South Omaha was fully cognizant of Briggs' attitude toward him, the Magic City is made a co-defendant. There are three counts in the claim for damages. One of these is that the day before Christmas Barry was arrested and forced to spend Christmas eve in the city lockup, which was not a sanitary place, and without a place to sleep, nothing but iron rails and cement floors. The iron then entered into Barry's soul and possibly the cement hardened his determination to sue.
