BRIEF IN EXPRESS CASES

Attorney General Makes Showing of Earnings of Adams Company.

TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS NET

This is Only What is Earned on Intrastate Business — Maintained the New Rates Are Not Confiscatory.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

LINCOLN, Feb. 2.—(Special.)—Attorney General Thompson has completed his brief in the case of the express companies doing business in Nebraska, in which the state is seeking to force the companies to obey the Sibley law. This law reduces the rate of express charges 25 per cent.

In the brief filed in the case of the Adams Express company, Mr. Thompson shows that it has earned in the state, based on reports for six months and an estimate of earnings for six months, during the last year, $26,157.92. This sum is not after there has been paid all of the expenses of the company, including salaries, for equipment and all other expenses.

The following table shows in detail the earnings and expenses of the company:

Intrastate revenue and expenses in Nebraska for April, May, June, July August and September, 1908, taken as an average six months and doubled to show the year's business.

Total intrastate revenue from business received, collect and prepaid	$326,541.80
EXPENSES.
Transportation	$193,512.74
For purpose of ascertaining the per cent of terminal expenses against intrastate revenue, the revenue is doubled because it must bear expense of two terminals.
Interstate revenue	$ 645,865.00
Intrastate rev., doubled	677,083.60
Business received and forwarded	$1,318,865.60
Total terminal expenses, $125,028.78 x51.004 per cent	81,162.96
Train messengers, loss and damages, and taxes, estimated 6 per cent	20,192.50
General, division and department salaries and expenses, estimated 7½ per cent	25,240.63
Total intrastate expenses	$320,109.74
Net revenue from intrastate express, 4.8 per cent	16,432.06
Money Order Business—
Total revenue	$ 5,547.66
Less 22½ per cent on $4,217.36 received at commission offices	1,466.72
General expense, estimated 7½ per cent	416.06
Net revenue from money order business	2,725.86
Total net revenue, 5.5 per cent	$ 20,157.92

Conclusion of Attorney General.

In conclusion Mr. Thompson says it is respectfully submitted:

First—That in this action by the state to prevent the defendant from exacting compensation in excess of the rates limited by statute, the existence of the statute and the defendant's refusal to comply with its terms make a prima facie case in favor of plaintiff, since the statute is presumed to be valid.

Second—In this suit by the state to prevent defendant from charging rates in excess of those fixed by law, the testimony that the operating expenses of defendant, under the statutory rates, would deprive it of the right to proper earnings is insufficient to overturn the statute, where the nature and necessity of important items of expense are not disclosed.

Third—The statute reducing express rates cannot be set aside as confiscatory on testimony which fails to show the effect of the reduced rates on new business. The defendant having failed to make such showing it becomes unnecessary to examine the testimony offered by the state.

Fourth—A rate statute should never be set aside without the fullest disclosure of all material facts, and the statute reducing express rates should not be set aside as confiscatory on testimony of defendant that it would be compelled to do its business at a loss under the new rates, where the testimony is based on operations under the old rates, and evidence of actual operations under the new rates show a profit.

Fifth—By the use of reasonable and just methods for apportioning operating expenses between state and interstate business, the rates fixed by the legislature in controversy are shown by actual trial for six months to be amply remunerative.

Sixth—The penalties provided for in the Sibley act are not so drastic as to render the act unconstitutional, and if the penalties were unconstitutional they would not invalidate the remainder of the act. (Wilcox against Consolidated Gas Company of New York, decided by the United States supreme court January 4, 1909.)

Seventh—The amount of taxes paid by defendant company constitutes no correct basis for the measurement of the value of the property devoted to the express business.

Rapid Rise of Nebraskan.

Frank Shearon of Santa Fe, N. M., has been appointed postmaster at that place. Mr. Shearon was at one time court reporter for Judge Letton when the latter was on the district bench. He left Nebraska for New Mexico some years ago because of ill health, and since going there has been chief clerk in the office of the land commissioner, and when appointed postmaster he was assistant attorney general of the territory. A Santa Fe paper has been received by Judge Letton with a column story about the rapid rise of the young Nebraskan.

Receiver is Asked For.

Alleging that the officers of the Eureka Manufacturing company have grossly mismanaged the affairs of the company; that they have drawn exorbitant salaries for nominal services; that they have allowed unjust judgments to be taken against the company; that they have dissipated the assets of the company and allowed the business to run down until the organization is now in poor financial condition, Charles H. Swallow, former president of the company, has secured a restraining order against the present officers to prevent them from paying some creditors of the company in preference to others.

Mr. Swallow also asks the district court to appoint a receiver for the company to manage its affairs and pay off its liabilities in proper order of preference. The hearing on the restraining order will be held before Judge A. J. Cornish next Saturday morning, at which time one of the most important legal contests of the present term of court will be begun.

The company is capitalized for $700,000. The total value of its property seems to be entirely uncertain and its liabilities are said to exceed $300,000. Connected with the concern are a number of the best known business men of the city and its affairs seem to be in considerable confusion. The present company was formed for the purpose of manufacturing and selling a patented grain grader. It took over the Lincoln Sash and Door company, with its established factory here, and the question of the liability of the present company for the debts of the sash and door company is one of confusing details of the case.

The plaintiff in this case was president and general manager of the company for a time. He was also a stockholder of the sash and door company and as such claims that he is liable for the indebtedness of that company, if it is not paid by the company that took over its business, property and affairs.

Purchased the Patent.

The petition states that when the company was organized a few years ago it had an original capitalization of $500,000. Of this amount 400,000 shares were issued in exchange for the patent for the grain grader that the company was organized to manufacture and sell. The patent was valued at $40,000, which would make the purchase value of the company shares 10 cents a share. In August of 1907 the capitalization of the company was increased to $700,000 for the purpose of taking over the Lincoln Sash and Door factory, at a valuation of $75,000. The factory was bought to enable the company to make its own frames and woodwork for its machines. The sash and door factory at that time is alleged to have had an indebtedness of $230,000, which the defendant company is said to have assumed. Since that time the plaintiff claims that an indebtedness of about $75,000 has been contracted. He wants the question of the priority of claims of the different creditors passed upon by the court and asks that in case of a deficit an assessment for an unpaid portion of the shares of the company stock be levied to meet the indebtedness.

The persons named as defendants along with the company are the following: A. O. Taylor, J. F. Kaufman, William Grady, W. M. Leonard and R. C. Heinter.

Plans for Water Works Reservoir.

The plans for the new 1,000,000-gallon concrete, rectangular reservoir at the Mockett pumping station were adopted by the council at the regular business meeting Monday night. After the recommendations of the city engineer the city clerk was instructed to advertise for the bids. The engineer's estimate of the cost of the reservoir is $12,000. The only dispute of the meeting arose when the matter of the shape of the reservoir was brought up, some favoring the rectangular shaped structure, while others favored the saucer shaped walls. In addition to the adoption of the plans for the new reservoir bids for the new fire station at Twenty-seventh and Pratt streets were reported, and the bid of C. F. Beras accepted.

Councilman Hoppe reported that he had investigated the reports of the gas inspector and had asked for tests to determine whether the gas company's instruments or the city's were at fault.

State Federation of Churches.

The meeting of delegates for the formation of a state federation of churches is being held today at the First Presbyterian church. In the morning a temporary organization was effected by electing Rev. Mr. Wickam temporary chairman and Rev. S. Z. Batten secretary. Delegates from all over the state are in attendance at the meeting. Plans for the formation of the federation were discussed in the morning session. Important committees were appointed including a finance and a constitutional committee.

At the afternoon session the Rev. R. B. McBride of Omaha delivered an address upon "Federation and the Evangelistic Work." The necessity of co-operation in church work was presented by Mr. McBride. Dr. C. O. Cowan of Crete, spoke on "The Main Proposition." Both of the addresses were along the line of union in church work. The constitution committee will make a report late this evening and this will be followed by the election of officers. A night program to be given at the First Presbyterian church has been arranged for.

Following is the list of delegates to the meeting:

More Jobs Than Men.

"Of course it pays to advertise," remarked Deputy Commissioner of Labor Maupihn this morning. "I have received a number of letters from men who wanted farm jobs this season, and not knowing what farmers might be in need of help, I asked the newspapers to notify the farmers that I could supply a few 'hired hands.' The papers kindly consented, and now I have more requests for men than I have requests for places. This morning's mail brought requests from seventeen farmers who want help, and one of them wants four men and another one three.

"Several of the farmers want to give employment to married men, offering to furnish house, garden patch and feed for one cow.

"Now that I have more requests for men than I have for employment, I want the newspapers to spread the news that men who are out of work and want farm jobs can have their wants supplied by applying to the deputy commissioner of labor. There are certainly a lot of men who are looking for work, and I have had it demonstrated to my satisfaction that Nebraska farmers are looking for men."
