Blow for Lincoln Resorts.

The supreme court today dealt a telling blow to Ninth street resorts in Lincoln, against which property owners have been waging a fight for years. In a decision handed down this morning it sustained the district court in closing by injunction the resort of Rose Eirkwood, located on the borders of the proscribed district.

The injunction was secured by a property wner across the street from the place on the ground it was a nuisance. The district court sustained the injunction and an appeal was taken to the supreme court. The court pholds the lower court.

In the opinion the supreme court says he place is a nuisance and it does not mater whether it was there before the com plaining property owner located in the neighborhood or not. The fact that the potce have allowed it to run and that it is located in the designated district does not save it, according to the court.
