All this, I venture to say, is the result of the golden role in your diplomacy and adoption of the same rule in ours, and I most emphatically declare that so long as the golden rule is considered as the guiding principle of your diplomacy (we shall be enabled to enjoy the birth of Abraham Lincoin. Charles Magoan, former provisional governor of Cuba; Curtis Guild, ir., governor of Cuba; Curtis Guild, ir., governor of Massachusetts, and Prof. John Clark Freeman were the other speakers of the evening. Ambassador Takahira was enthusiastically received. In his address he gave a brilliant eulogy on the life of the great emancipator from a foreign point of view, emancipator from a foreign point of view, concluding a tribute to the golden rule of diplomacy as exemplified by Lincoln and Hay and in which category of states men he placed Theodore Roosevelt, owing to the president's efforts to stave off anti-Japanese legislation on the Pacific

Baron Takahira's speech follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: I feel highly gratified to be able to avail myself of your courteous invitation to attend your banquet this evening which is given in commomoration of the 160th anniversary of the birth of your great martyred president. Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Lincoln has left in his life a great example of a public man, not only of his own, but of all countries. It is no wonder that his fame is world-wide and adorns the universal history of the modern age as one of the greatest men that ever lived.

Another feature of his life which ap-

Another feature of his life which ap-ears particularly interesting and in-tructive to me as a diplomat was his aethod of conducting the foreign affairs of this country.

Those who learned to admire his method of diplomatic transactions called it "Lincoln diplomacy," the diplomacy which upheld the dignity and interests of the United States when it still remained in a less important position and under very adverse circumstances. Mr. John Hay, who was once President Lincoln's secretary, said in speaking of American diplomacy:

"The briefest expression of our rule of conduct is perhaps the Monroe doctrine and the Golden Rule."

United States and Japan.

The history of the diplomatic relation between the United States and Japan and other far eactern countries is repicte with every description of the friendly acts taken by those which might be considered as an application of the golden rule and there is every reason that such application of the golden rule in your diplomacy with these countries is being attributed by the adoption of the same rule in their diploadoption of the same rule in their diplo-macy towards you. Now let me make a few remarks about our relation in order to show you how the golden rule has been observed between the two countries and sylvania state capitol, who spoke on "The

also why it must be observed:

I have becessarily to begin with the remarkable success of Commodore Perry's mission which was zent to Japan some half contary ago in order to open and introduce into the community of nations and the country which was then only terra incognito. Not speaking of the great debt of gratitude Japan owes to the United States for its friendly introduction into the international community, it is a noteworthy fact that the American government has been careful in the selection of its representatives in Japan in order to accomplish what has been left for them to do by Perry's mission.

Again when there was apprehension of misundersianding to arise between us in regard to the trademarks, copyrights and other matters of kindred nature on the Asiatic continent the two governments opened negotiations and cencluded conventions with the view to protect our mutual interests in this-regard. We also began a tresty for the general arbitration of controversies between the two countries and lastly, as you are aware, we exchanged a few months ago a declaration defining the policy of the two government in China in the Pacific ocean with a view to encourage the free and peaceful development of the commerce of the two nations and also to preserve the general peace in that region. Thus we have been using every effort to remove all possible causes of misunderstanding and conflict between the two countries, and to bring about the clear and definite understanding between the two countries in order to cement the closest bond of friendship and good neighborhood. All this, I venture to say, is the result of the application of the solden role in your Evidences of Good Will.

Following Lincoln and Grant and men of their day acted well their part in the greatest of modern struggles, but they left to those who should come after them the completion of the work which they commenced. The necessities of our world-wide commerce and the national defense prompted the United States to construct the isthmian canal and brought within our friendly protection the infant republic of Panama. I doubt not that the uitimate destiny of the Philippines will be the creation therein of a free and independent soversignty. I doubt not that Cuba will be permitted to work out its own salvation, and that the United States will continue to recognize the services the building committee will submit its statement. The dedicatory prayer will be given by Rev. George VanWinkle
