

COURT ROASTS VAN GOODELL

Sears Denounces Wanton Murderer in Sentencing Him to Penitentiary for Life.

Van Goodell will spend the 4th of September of every year for the rest of his life thinking over the murder of Edna Bennett.

Judge Sears sentenced Goodell Saturday morning to confinement at hard labor for life, "but on the anniversary of the day of the murder each year, it is the sentence of the court that you be kept in solitary confinement."

Goodell received a stern condemnation when he rose for sentence. First asked if he had anything to say, he twisted around and then mumbled, "Nothing to say." He started to add something to this, but checked himself.

"This has been one of the most brutal murders ever before this court," said the judge, "at least during my connection with it. The jury has found you guilty on the evidence and I think the evidence amply sustains the verdict."

"This was a girl, who at one time, had put her life and reputation in your trust and keeping, and in order to excuse yourself you come before the court and did, I think, worse than murder, when you uttered those words tending to blacken her character. Some things you said and some even more vicious you left unsaid, but with a suggestion that was worse. There is no doubt that you were sane when you made those statements, and I feel that all your life you will regret that you came into court before your fellowmen and did this."

"It is never a pleasant task to sentence a young man to the penitentiary, but I cannot help but think that one like you might well be removed from the presence of law-abiding men and women."

Pronouncement of the sentence followed. Before the prisoner had been called upon to stand to receive sentence, his counsel, W. W. Slabaugh, had declined to argue the motion for a new trial, saying there were no capital errors either in the instructions to the jury or in the rulings on evidence and he had filed the motion as a formality.

An appeal to the supreme court is accordingly unlikely and Goodell will start Monday for the state penitentiary. He received the sentence without a sign of emotion other than twisting his hands nervously.

SON ACCUSED OF ROBBING PA

When Victim of Theft Goes to Police He Finds His Own Son Arrested.

Going to the police station Saturday morning to secure a set of harness that had been stolen from him and recovered by the police, A. A. Fancher found that the man who had been arrested and charged with the theft was his own son.

Fancher is a grader and horse trader and lives at 414 Lafayette avenue. His son, Rufus A. Fancher, who had the stolen harness under his arm, is an unmarried man about 25 years of age and is said to live at Fifteenth and Marcy streets. A bottle of "cock" was found on his person when he was arrested by Patrolman Hudson Saturday morning. The officer also recovered the harness. The younger Fancher is being held on the charge of burglary.

Staples on the barn door of A. A. Fancher had been pried off by the man, who took a double set of brass trimmed harness, worth about $15. A buggy belonging to G. W. Ferris of Twenty-first and Cumby streets was borrowed by the younger Fancher Thursday night, supposedly for the purpose of hauling away the harness. It was not returned, but was found later.
