At that meeting, lastnent Omaha jeweler, stick to their estimates that the necklace is worth at least man of the church should contribute $5 a $100,000 and that New York authorities have year to the cause of foreign missions and taken steps to get John Savis, alias John this is what is known as the "Omaha Sciavenitis, the Greek from whom the neck- plan." It is in vogue throughout the United ace was taken, back to the Empire state. States.

One strange feature of the case causing remark is that only $500 reward would be offered for a necklace worth $160,000. The organization of the First Presbyterian argument offered to reconcile this is that church of Omaha and the Presbyterian men the owners place a low estimate of value of Omaha are invited to a banquet this on their article, not wishing to make a evening at the Young Men's Christian aslarger reward.

Savis Even Wants Money. Savis himself thinks that because he is the man who found it, the reward should go to him. Mandannia, who went to Mandelberg's jewelry store and asked for s price on one pearl after being closeted with Savis at the Rome hotel and learning of the latter's possession of the gema, declared that if it had not been for his trick of sending Savis after the rest of the necklace, it would never have been recovered. Otto Heinze of New York, of copper fame, to whose wife the strand of pearls recovered in Omaha belongs, has telegraphed Chief of Detectives John H. Savage he will come to Omaha to take possession of the necklace. He states that he will leave New York Friday or Saturday. John Savis, the Greek, is not mentioned in the message to the local police and it is a matter of conjecture locally just what will become of him. It has been suggested
