I got my flannels out, and then I gaily put them back again
And when the weather changed about, Once more I got my flannels out.
Thus out and back, until, alack!
La Grippe has laid me on the rack,
And cold or heat, or rain or snow Unhonored and unflanneled go.

Omaha folks who attended the inaugural ball at Washington returned with comparisons with our own Ak-Sar-Ben ball, which are not at all unfavorable to our great autumn social affair. This is what one Omaha observer says: "The inaugural ball is, of course, on a nuch larger scale than our Ak-Sar-Ben ball. The hall of the pension building in which the ball is held in Washington is at least four times as large as that part of our den that is devoted to the ball. What I would call the outside arrangements at Washington were much better perfected than here in Omaka. Different entrances were assigned to different classes of conveyances so that the private carriages came to one door, the automobiles to another and the public and livery carriages to another. All the principal liverymen in Washington pooled their carriages and issued a return ticket so that any one sing a 'ivery carriage on leaving the ball room could take the first one that came up brought him. This did away with all delay, calling of numbers and incident confusion. The check room facilities were ample, with plenty of attendants, so that there was no congestion in the coat rooms. "On the floor, however, there was little or no order, just a jumbled mass of promenaders with nothing to do but to gaze at the occupants of the presidential box and reserved galleries or stand around a small Miss Bess Moorhead, Miss Anna Peterson, corner supposed to be allotted to dancers. Miss Helen Ribbel, Miss Ellen Rooney, Miss One portion of the gallery was held for Millicent Stebbins, Miss Ethel Tukey, Miss special guests and members of the ball he notables to get together. There was no other prepared feature of the ball, except the entre of the presidential party, which consisted of a march by the president and vice president and their wives, escorted by members of the committee in charge through an aisle formed between ropes of red, white and blue silk, held by the floor men and leading around a fountain in the center. As soon as this performance was concluded those near enough whipped out knives and cut the ropes in pieces for souvenirs. The spectacular representation of the crowning of the queen by King Ak-Sar-Ben with its preliminary march of courtlers and subsequent court quadrille is much more impressive and entertaining There was, of course, much greater display
