C. W. BAIRD LEAVES MICHIGAN

Picking All-Eastern Basketball Team is a Very Hard Task—Columbia Players Appear to Be Strongest of Easterners.

The selection of an all-eastern basketball team this season presents greater difficulties than ever before.

Yale Man Praised Columbia. That, apparently, is the view of William Lush, the former Yale basketball coach, who picked the Columbia team as a whole for his choice of an all-eastern intercollegiate five.

That puts aside Keimath and Kiefaber of Pennsylvania, who in other seasons have been rated as exceptional players.

Mr. Baird had the following to say on the day when his resignation was announced: "Things are already looking brighter and an agreement that in another year Michigan will be well on her way back to her position as leader of the west in athletics."

During Mr. Baird's stay at Michigan a great many things were accomplished in the way of improving the athletic plant of the institution and for most of this he is responsible.

That seven regatta. "There seems to be some doubt about whether the Naval academy authorities have extended invitations to some of the leading rowing universities to compete in a regatta to be held on the Severn."
